RUSSIA ARRESTS 9 FOREIGNERS AS ECONOMIC SPIES

20 Soviet Employes of Trade Firm Jailed

Reds Fight New Deal

The Tribune secures copy of official instructions sent to communists in the United States by the Red International Trade Unions of Moscow. The communists are ordered to wreck President Roosevelt's recovery program. The Tribune first revealed the existence of such orders in dispatches from its correspondent in Riga, Latvia, in October. Exclusive excerpts from the instructions may be found on page 8.

MOSCOW, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A new "spy case," which may rival in sensations the celebrated British Metropolitan-Vickers affair, has arisen in Russia, it was disclosed today, with the arrest of the general manager and five foreign representatives of the Controll company branch of Société Generaledes Surveillances, Ltd., of Geneva. They were charged with economic espionage.

The company is an international organization which certifies exports to principal ports of the world.

Twenty Russian employés of the firm, which has functioned in soviet Russia for a dozen years, have also been taken into custody.

Six Foreigners Seized.

The foreigners under arrest are two Austrian subjects, two Germans, one Belgian and one Dane, all of whom have represented the company for many years in this country. They, along with the Russian employés, were arrested over a period of four months beginning in September and ending the latter part of December, it was revealed.

So closely were they confined, however, that not even members of the foreign legations of their respective countries were permitted to see them.

No mention of the case so far has been published officially in Moscow, and as the men have not yet been formally indicted, the place of trial, if one is held, is not yet known.

German, Austrian and Danish government representatives were here, however, seeking information in the matter, and the International Red Cross has interested itself in the case of the Belgian, whose country has no diplomatic relations with Russia.

Foreign Prisoners Listed.

The foreigners are:

Three Other Aliens Seized.

Three other foreigners employed in Russian industrial plants having no connection with the Controll company beyond the fact that they were friends of Josef Weinzettl, the Austrian, also have been taken into custody on the same charges.

They are Richard Kirschaj, an Austrian; Victor Wiernann, a German employed in the agricultural machinery factory at Nicolaev on the Black sea, and Heinrich Karl, a German working in the Nicolaev shipyard.

Although the case parallels in one respect the Metropolitan-Vickers affair, those under arrest were held as individuals, and the company as such was not involved.

The firm, which maintains headquarters in Moscow, continues to operate and even now is negotiating a new contract with the Russian government, the old one having expired last summer.

Firm Certifies Cargoes.

The company is engaged in certifying cargoes of exports from Russia to all parts of the world, principally grain, lumber and oil. The certification involves the company's guarantee for the quantity and quality of the various cargoes, on receipt of which banks in the countries concerned make immediate settlement instead of waiting for examination of the goods.

In the Metropolitan-Vickers Electrical company case two British engineers were convicted of espionage and three were ordered expelled last April. The convicted men were released after representations by Great Britain.

Dr. Wynekoop Demands Trial Go On

Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop will be in court this morning to face a jury which is ready to begin hearing evidence on the murder of her daughter-in-law Rheta. This was indicated last night as the physician, who is 62 years old, rallied from a heart attack which she suffered Saturday night in the county jail infirmary.

Although Dr. Francis W. McNamara, chief of the jail medical staff, was uncertain whether she would be able to appear in the courtroom of Judge Joseph B. David today, the defendant insisted there must be no delay in her trial.

Insists on Going to Court.

"I will brook no interference by you or any one else," Dr. Wynekoop told the jail physician. "I insist on going to court and I forbid you to interfere."

After examining the defendant at noon Dr. McNamara issued the following bulletin on her condition:

"Pulse 86. Temperature, 99.6. Heart action, slower, softer, but irregular. Pain in chest, arm, and finger, which was due to a coronary spasm Saturday night much improved under medication and bandages. Patient mentally alert and very restless, sleeping at intervals for short periods. No difficulty now in her breathing from which she suffered Saturday night."

Defense Staff Ready.

Attorney W. W. Smith, chief of the defense staff, continued yesterday to make preparation for Dr. Wynekoop's appearance in court today when the prosecutor's opening statement accusing the defendant of slaying Rheta will be made to the jury. Although the physician will probably not take the witness stand for at least a week, she made notes yesterday on what she hopes to tell the jury, all the while radiating confidence that she will be acquitted.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon Matron Clara Bauler, a sister-in-law of Ald. Mathias Bauler, came off duty and reported that the patient's mind was active and that she had spent most of the day making plans for her court appearance. The matron said she reminded Dr. Wynekoop that the trial would be "quite an ordeal."

"Don't I know it," was the doctor's reply.

Appears to Enjoy Lunch.

The prisoner ate the regular jail dinner of roast beef, spaghetti, potatoes and gravy, coffee and pie, the matron said, and appeared to relish the meal.

During the afternoon, the matron said, Dr. Wynekoop appeared to worry over how she would reach the witness stand from her chair at her counsel's table. At present she is carried into court in a wheel chair which is removed before the jury arrives. Judge David had ruled that the wheel chair is not to be seen by the jury, which might be swayed by the defendant's infirmities.

She also asked whether she would take the witness stand today. Matron Bauler told her there were 57 witnesses to be called and all would probably testify before the defense puts her on the stand. Later Dr. Wynekoop expressed anger over reports that she was near death.

"There must be no delay in my trial," she said again. "I am as innocent as you are."

Appears Weak and Tired.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon Dr. Wynekoop ate a supper of fruit salad, a roll and tea and then slept for several hours. On awakening she chatted with Matron Anna Jacobs and another attendant until she retired for the night. She appeared tired and weak, the matron said.

Under the same roof with Dr. Wynekoop, on the fifth floor of the county jail building, twelve other persons spent a monotonous Sunday afternoon. They are the jurors who will decide Dr. Wynekoop's fate. They were locked up over the week-end, since the law demands they be separated from society during the progress of the trial.

THE NERVOUS JUGGLER

Walker Hines, Former Rail Chief, Is Dead

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Walker D. Hines, director general of American railroads from 1919 to 1920, died today in Merino, Italy, relatives here were notified.

Hines, who was 63 years old, went to Europe last June as head of a mission to study economic rehabilitation of Turkey. He had stopped in Italy for a few months because of ill health.

Death was caused by apoplexy, said a cablegram from Mrs. Hines, who with their daughter, Mrs. Paul Tison of Darien, Conn., had accompanied the noted attorney and administrator. Burial will be in Florence, Italy.

Lawyer from Kentucky.

Hines, a native of Russellville, Ky., practiced law in Louisville after his graduation from the University of Virginia in 1893. He became general counsel and later chairman of the board of the Atchison, Topeka, and Santa Fé railroad.

In 1906 he went to New York to practice his profession, remaining there until he became assistant director general of railroads in 1918, succeeding William G. McAdoo.

He's Sent to Europe.

After the railroads had been turned back to private operation, Hines was appointed arbitrator under the peace treaties on questions of river shipping in Europe. Under his direction the claims of middle European nations were considered, rules for selecting German boats to restore river shipping were issued, and France was awarded 13⅓ per cent of Germany's Rhine fleet.

In September, 1920, Germany sought to have him ousted from his arbitration post, but the allied council of ambassadors, meeting in Paris, overruled the request.

Finishes Danube Job.

After surveying the situation for more than a year, Hines completed the Danube portion of his duties, confirming seizure by the allies of most of the central powers' river shipping. In September, 1921, the council of ambassadors authorized him to return to the United States, permitting assistants to finish his work in Europe.

He resumed his law practice in New York, but in the summer of 1925 he was asked to make an investigation for the league of nations on navigation on the Rhine and the Danube. At the close of his inquiry, the league assembly praised his work.

POLICEMAN GETS WET, BUT PASTOR GETS AUTO BACK

The Rev. John O. Crawford, 3843 North Hamilton avenue, pastor of the Joyce Episcopal church, Seeley avenue and Byron street, complained yesterday to Desk Sergeant Edward Kent of the Albany park station, that his automobile had been stolen from in front of 2547 Blaine place.

"We'll get it back," promised Sergt. Kent. "They can't steal clergymen's automobiles in this district."

Policemen William Hugaro and Sylvester Karofsky were assigned to the case. They saw the clergyman's car at Kedzie and Montrose avenues. The three youths in the car also saw the policeman and a chase followed in which the pursuers fired a dozen shots.

At Spaulding and Foster avenues the fugitives abandoned the stolen car, ran down an embankment and into an old canal containing three feet of water. Policeman Karofsky followed them into the water and seized one of the boys who gave his name as Frank Ochal, 17 years old, of 1426 Superior street. The other two escaped.

Captor and captive returned to the police station, both dripping wet. The Rev. Mr. Crawford was notified. "I guess they can't steal clergymen's cars in this district," he agreed with Desk Sergeant Kent.

IT'S THIS SORT OF THING THAT MAKES ERIC MAD

Eric Pearson, 52 years old, 929 Oakdale avenue, a janitor, became angry last night when a bandit tried to rob him and his brother, Arvid, near their home. The robber became angry, too, and he snapped the trigger of his revolver at Eric several times. The weapon failed to discharge. This made Eric more angry. He took the gun away from the bandit and snapped the trigger at him several times. Again the gun failed to discharge. The bandit fled. Eric examined his gun. There were no bullets in it. Eric's anger still rose. "I should have thrown the gun at him," he complained.

700 SAVED IN FIRE AT THEATER OF C. W. MURPHY

The theater, largest in this section of the state, was given to the city by Charles Webb Murphy, former owner of the Chicago Cubs and a native of Wilmington. It was built in 1918 at a cost of $350,000.

U.S. Tars Land in War-Swept Town of China

FOOCHOW, China, Jan. 15 (Monday).—(AP)—A United States naval party was ordered ashore here today from the American gunboat U. S. S. Tulsa to protect the 144 Americans in this fallen rebel capital. The action was taken following upon a request of Gordon Burke, vice consul in charge of the United States consular district in Foochow.

Commander F. G. Reinicke, captain of the Tulsa, immediately ordered a force ashore. The Tulsa has been standing by at Foochow since shortly after trouble broke out between rebel forces and Nationalist government troops seeking to crush the secessionist movement in Fukien province.

Firing Within City.

British and Japanese naval authorities had taken similar action when tension between Chinese elements became so strong that serious outbreaks seemed inevitable.

A group of leaderless soldiers from the 19th Route army fired on Nationalist government naval marines in the city's native quarter, killing two and wounding two others.

Gen. Tsai Ting-kai, commander of the 19th, who now is in Foochow, and Admiral Chen Shao-kwan, the Nationalist government's naval minister, were striving to maintain order and peacefully remove the 19th Route army to the south.

British naval forces landed 30 marines to guard the British consulate while the Japanese increased their number of marines ashore from 130 to 480, the latter figures being an official Japanese statement.

Gen. Tsai Stays in City.

Included in the large foreign population of Foochow were about 144 Americans, most of whom, however, had been removed to safer territory when the Nationalist government warned foreign occupants to withdraw.

Gen. Tsai Ting-kai was the only separatist officer who remained within the area. The others, including leaders of the rebellion, having ignominiously fled with the close approach of danger.

A grave situation resulted from the pell mell descent of thousands of disorganized rebel soldiers upon the city. Fear of looting was widespread. Reports from south Fukien province said residents feared disorders might engulf that portion of the province if the defeated forces flowed into it. Canton authorities placed 30,000 troops on the Fukien border to prevent the rebels from entering Kwangtung province.

Grau Martin, President of Cuba, Resigns

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

HAVANA, Jan. 15 [Monday].—Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin resigned today as president of Cuba. Although the revolutionary junta has not formally accepted his resignation it is certain to do so. Selection of a new president is under discussion at Camp Columbia where the junta's meetings are held. Members of the junta said that Dr. Grau Martin was weak, highly unpopular and therefore it was necessary to replace him.

It was said by members of the junta that they desired to form a new government which will receive sufficient public support to obtain recognition by the United States. It is expected that the new government will be a swing to the left. The heads of the army and navy, all the left wing cabinet members and radical students attended the junta.

Seize U. S. Owned Power Co.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HAVANA, Jan. 14. — President Ramon Grau San Martin today signed a decree confiscating all properties of the American owned Cuban Electric company, a 100 million dollar concern which operates 85 power plants in Havana and the western part of the island.

The step was taken after the company's refusal to accept a list of demands presented by the workers had precipitated a nation-wide strike of 60,000 employés. The walkout forced the city and a large part of the island to do without gas, light, street car, telephone, power and water service from 6 a. m. until noon. Service was restored after the decree under supervision of soldiers.

Caffery Protests.

Jefferson Caffery, President Roosevelt's personal representative here, protested the confiscation at a long conference with President Grau tonight. It is reliably learned that Grau told Caffery the government intends to confiscate all foreign properties, the owners of which do not comply with labor's demands and that Americans will be no exception to the rule.

The presidential decree, drawn by Secretary of Interior Guiteras, explains that the government will temporarily operate all plants, comply with all labor demands, and that all expenditures, including the cost of government administration, will be charged to the company. The labor department will act as the operating agency, with Secretary of Labor Albert Giraudy as general manager. Archer K. Jones, general manager for the company, was removed under the decree.

"The confiscation lasts until the company accepts in full the workers' 35 demands," the decree stated.

Company Lacks Revenue.

Jones asserted that the company's financial resources are limited because no compensation has been received from the government and three-fourths of the private homes and industries served since Grau assumed the presidency on Sept. 4. For that reason, he said, it is impossible for the company to meet the demands for higher wages.

SEIZE GOLD COIN AND REVALUE IT, ROOSEVELT PLAN

Will Ask Congress to Back Program.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—(Special.)—President Roosevelt tomorrow will send a message to congress outlining his monetary policy and asking for additional power to push it ahead boldly.

The message is expected to be of vast import and the greatest secrecy surrounded its terms tonight. There were reports that the President would announce the price at which he will revalue the dollar, a maneuver which would be of the most vital significance in the money and commodity markets of the world.

Some of the reports had it that the new value of the dollar will be around 60 cents, as compared with the old gold standard dollar of 100 cents.

Seeks to Seize Gold.

The President also will ask congress for specific authority to take into the United States treasury all monetary gold stocks in the country, which includes 3 billion 600 million dollars of gold held in the federal reserve banks.

Involved in this transaction will be a profit to the treasury of more than two and a half billion dollars, derived from the reduced gold value of the dollar.

Tells Group of Plans.

Mr. Roosevelt disclosed his plans tonight to members of the banking and currency committees of the senate and house, and after the conference the White House issued the following statement:

"The President and the secretary of the treasury conferred tonight with Democratic and Republican members of the banking and currency committees of the senate and house. The subjects under discussion were:

"The method of taking into the treasury the title to and ownership of all monetary gold in the United States and also the general subject of revaluation of the gold content of the dollar.

"The President expects to send a message to the congress on these subjects tomorrow."

Conferees Tight Lipped.

As the senators and congressmen filed out of the White House, shortly after half past ten o'clock tonight, after a discussion of an hour and a half, they were tight-lipped on what had transpired within.

The ordinarily voluble speaker of the house, Henry T. Rainey, and the Democratic leader of the senate, Joseph T. Robinson, would say no more than that "the President will issue a statement later."

But when the statement, as given above, was dictated to the newspaper men by the presidential secretary, Stephen T. Early, it was not much more communicative than the congressmen had been.

President Demands Secrecy.

Finally it was learned that the President had put the strictest sort of injunction upon all those attending the conference, pledging them to secrecy. The President informed those present at the outset that if there was a "leak" on the matter he was to disclose it would result in giving an unfair advantage to speculators in England and in France.

The matter was of such moment, he declared, that its premature disclosure would result in feverish activity on the speculative exchanges in the world, and he pointed out that the bourse and the London Stock exchange have a five hour advantage on the opening of the New York exchange, he cautioned all the conferees, "on their honor" to maintain secrecy.

In the light of these extraordinary instructions, the impending action by the President partook of far greater significance than could be indicated by the innocent nature of the White House statement.

Meets New Deal Expense.

It has been known for weeks—was first exclusively foretold in THE TRIBUNE more than five weeks ago—that Mr. Roosevelt intended to seize the federal reserve banks' gold stocks and use the profit therefrom to help toward financing the costly emergency measures of the New Deal.

It has also been an open secret that the President was simultaneously to announce a devaluation of the dollar. Conjecture brought the assumption that he would disclose the point of devaluation, and it was generally conceded that this step would have a most decided effect on the markets of the world.

It was learned that the President showed more frankness in his discussion with the senators and representatives than he has ever before shown in any public or semi-public statements on his monetary policy. His message to congress, it was reported, will in part be directed to the country, and will be a defense as well as a partial delineation of his aims.

Reports that Mr. Roosevelt was to seek a clarification of his powers under the Thomas amendment, by which he would be assured of power to change the gold content of the dollar as often as he choose, and to raise or lower it, were denied by some of those attending the meeting.

Already Has Power.

The President has been advised that he already has a clear power to raise or lower the gold content of the dollar at will, so long as he does not lower it by more than 50 per cent of the old gold value.

There is no doubt in the minds of those in touch with the President's policy that he intends to move toward the "managed" currency he has talked about, by which he hopes to maintain a steady range of prices in the country. Instead of prices going up and down in the normal ebb and flow of business economy, Mr. Roosevelt intends to move the value of the dollar up and down synthetically as the price changes develop.

In the seizure of the gold held by the federal reserve banks the plan of the President is to have the treasury issue gold notes of a face value equal to the amount of the gold taken, but on a devalued basis of reckoning.

Reserve Members Demur.

The President has taken the position that he already possesses the power, under the Thomas amendment, to take the federal reserve banks' gold under an executive order. But some members of the federal reserve board while recognizing that the banks would have to give up the profit on the gold stores, demurred a bit at turning such a huge sum over to the treasury on a mere Presidential writing.

It is understood now that the President will defer to the wishes of the reserve board members and obtain specific authorization from congress to this effect.

Those Who Were Invited.

Those invited to the White House tonight, most of whom were present, were:

Banking and currency committee of the senate—

Republicans—Norbeck [S. D.], Goldsborough [Md.], Townsend [Del.], Walcott [R. I.], Caroso [Wyo.], Couzens [Mich.], Steiwer [Ore.], Kean [N. J.].

House banking and currency committee—

Republicans—Luce [Mass.], Beedy [Me.], Stokes [Pa.], Hollister [Ohio], Wolcott [Mich.], Cavvichia [N. J.], Wadsworth [N. Y.], Simpson [Ill.].

Monetary Experts Foresee Activity on All Markets

Greatly increased activity in the commodity and stock exchanges may be expected this morning as the result of the announcement last night on President Roosevelt's monetary policy in the opinion of a number of Chicago economists and monetary experts. The President's proposal was termed by them one of the most important economic actions in the history of the United States.

All were agreed, however, that the President's proposal for the treasury to take over all the monetary gold in the country with the suggestion that devaluation of the dollar would follow, had been expected for several months. Consequently a large part of the expected results have already been discounted.

Price Rise Expected.

The economists interviewed last night were unanimously of the opinion that the man in the street would not be affected immediately. While the prices of the articles he must purchase to fill his daily requirements may be expected to rise, there is little immediate prospect of sensational advances.

"If the treasury takes over all gold, including that of the federal reserve system, the government will have a profit of perhaps 3 billion dollars at one swoop," Prof. Charles A. R. Wardwell, assistant professor of finance and economics at Northwestern university, said.

"Such a profit would accrue if the gold content of the dollar is placed at 60 cents, which seems to be the intention from reports in the capital.

"This would undoubtedly send up prices of commodities and equities—common stocks of corporations. However, this would be psychological rather than actual at the present time. The reason for this is that people, anticipating that prices will go higher later, may be expected to start buying at once. Naturally the more purchasing there is the higher prices will go.

"The price level rises only as money is spent or as money circulates faster. If new legislation is enacted by congress, it does not necessarily mean that more money will be spent immediately, but the expectation of a higher price level may cause an immediate movement."

"From the point of view of the man in the street, the action might help recovery somewhat," Prof. Wardwell continued. "This would result from the relief industry and commerce would get from the uncertainty which has pervaded the country and from the probability that there will be a return flow of capital to this country."

Prof. Dougall in Doubt.

Prof. Herbert Dougall, who teaches money and finance at Northwestern university, while declaring that the step is the only course the administration can take, was not so certain as to its beneficial results.

"If devaluation of the dollar is assured," he said, "the treasury should have all the gold in the country. But it is a matter of argument whether the treasury should devalue. The federal government in the near future must borrow from 6 to 7 billion dollars. I do not believe that devaluation will help them accomplish this.

"If the dollar is worth less than the value of government bonds, the interest on them will be worth less. To devalue and then announce that the government is going to borrow 6 or 7 billion dollars is inconsistent. The people will not be as willing to buy government bonds if they know that in the future their dollar will be worth less than it is when they purchase them.

"The big question is what will the treasury do with the gold after it acquires it. It does not mean that the treasury and the banks will expand, but it appears to be a step in this direction."

Can't Get Disturbed.

James H. Douglas Jr., undersecretary of the treasury in the Hoover administration and one of the leading figures in the recently formed Committee on Monetary Policy—a sound money group—asserted that the step has been expected right along.

"It is a logical conclusion," he said, "that we may expect the administration's proposal to exert an immediate bullish influence on the commodity and stock markets. I can't get very disturbed about the matter because we have all been expecting it. However, we need not expect to see an immediate rise in the cost of living."

U. S. LABOR HEADS TO MAKE REPORT ON NRA RESULTS

Meet in Washington on January 24.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Heads of the international unions composing the American Federation of Labor will gather in Washington Jan. 24 to report on actual operation of the NRA over the country and to draft a program of legislative demands to protect workers' interests.

The A. F. of L. program probably will be the signal for numerous efforts to amend the industrial law, most of which are being held in abeyance by their sponsors until labor decides what it wants.

See Shorter Day Demand.

The essentials of the program probably will call for radical shortening of work hours and substantial increase of minimum wages, plus definite legislation to forbid employer fostered company unions.

Besides the reports of the union heads, the federation is having assembled a survey of NRA results outside of union channels. College economists have been enlisted for this task to give the result an impartial tinge.

At present the feeling of labor leaders, as privately expressed, combines dissatisfaction and alarm. Outwardly they minimize the alarm part, support NRA principles and insist on a 30 hour work week and a say in the government of coded industries.

10,702,000 Still Jobless.

The federation estimates of reemployment, however, are considered frankly discouraging. The labor statisticians report 6,400,000 new jobs made under the entire recovery program, including the public works and civil works administration, but at the same time place the number of those still jobless at 10,702,000, suggesting a constant loss in regular employment. At the low point of last March the unemployment estimate stood at 13,000,000.

Of the 6,400,000 new jobs they credit only 1,800,000 to private industry operating under codes. An average reduction of 4½ hours in the work time of industrial employés is the net credited to the codes.

Company Unions Increase.

However, the most serious issue from the union side, the leaders say, is the increase in company unions, and the organized, aggressive campaign against national unions, they assert, is now being waged by industrialists generally.

Outstanding cases of what the employers call "employé representation" plans are now before the national labor board, NRA, and the department of justice, but so far nothing definite has been done. Senator Wagner, labor board chairman, is drafting a bill to remove all doubts as to where employé rights begin and end.

U. S. Has Basis for 25 Billions in Currency, Asserts Coughlin

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin today declared that by revaluing and nationalizing gold and restoring silver there is enough precious metal upon which to base 25 billion currency dollars, and urged his audience to write their representatives in congress demanding support of that program.

His subject was "A Reply to Mr. Warburg," and dealt mostly with an open letter to Father Coughlin made public last week by James P. Warburg, who was economic advisor to the American delegation at the London economic conference.

Claims World Shortage.

Warburg, described by Father Coughlin as a banker "of high repute," who "claims to favor a modernized gold standard," had said in his letter to the priest that "there is not enough gold and silver obtainable in the world" to carry out Father Coughlin's proposal for the retirement of 10 billion dollars of war bonds with currency "unless the currency so issued is unsecured printing press currency." 25 billion currency dollars.

Father Coughlin commented that Warburg's plan for "modernization does not imply revaluation." He said that by revaluing the 4 billion 500 million worth of gold in the United States at 8 billion 500 million, pricing silver at $1 an ounce instead of 44 cents, and nationalizing both, it would be possible under the federal reserve law to issue 25, billion currency dollars.

"Let Bankers Abide."

"The bankers made the law," he said. "Let them abide by it."

He proposed that if this 25 billion in currency, 10 billion be used for retirement of war bonds, or "bloody bonds," holders of which, he said, "now wax rich at the expense of widows of soldiers."

He said he did not suggest seizing and destroying the war bonds, as he said Mussolini had done, but paying "with treasury notes, noninterest bearing, for the interest bearing bonds."

Of Warburg's statement that Father Coughlin's currency proposal "is incomplete and not clear," the speaker said his suggestion of a currency system based upon both gold and silver apparently had been misunderstood.

Father Coughlin said he hoped that 10,000,000 persons would write to their senators or congressmen demanding enactment of his program and declared that success would "make America a land of financial independence." He compared the present fight to the revolution of 1776, "when a band of patriots dared to stand against foreign tyrants," and predicted that "the pen will prove mightier than the sword."

Of Warburg he said that "the blood of International bankers flows in his veins," and that he believes "bonds, even 'bloody bonds,' to be the bread of bankers."

Warburg, he said, formerly was an officer of the International Acceptance bank, which, he said, "was directly connected with the world war."

Blames Him for Criticism.

He credited Warburg with originating the "experimentation" criticism of the President's monetary policy which, he said, has been "plagiarized" by other critics, and described the banker as the "spokesman for Wall street" when Warburg said last fall he would "set about arousing the latent and inarticulate majority" of the American people against the administration's program.

The present debate, he said, "is between two schools of thought."

The issue, he declared, is "between repudiation and revaluation," and that something must be done "to keep capitalism from committing suicide."

Asserting that the bankers are playing into the hands of the communists, he said that "communism is as wrong as the international bankers," and that "I would just as soon live in Russia under the lash of Stalin as in America under the lash of Morgan."

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

JOHN GILBERT AND HIS WIFE ARE SEPARATED

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—John Gilbert, debonair actor of the screen, and his wife, the former Virginia Bruce, provided Hollywood's latest sensation today when they admitted they had separated. The parting came suddenly last Thursday when Mrs. Gilbert took their daughter and went to live with her mother. Gilbert remained in his hill-top mansion in Beverly Hills.

"There will not be a divorce, at least for the present," declared Mrs. Gilbert. "We could not agree on certain things so I decided it was better to go and live with my parents for a while. There is no other man and no other woman involved. Jack is a fine man and in parting we do so with the best of feelings. I have our baby, but Jack can see her anytime he wants to."

The child, Susan Ann Gilbert, was born five months and twelve days ago yesterday.

Two Bombs Exploded at Chicago Art Marble Plant

Bomb Wrecks Miners Home.

Taylorville, Ill., Jan. 15 [Monday].—[Special.]—The home of Vern Irvin, working miner employed at Peabody mine, No. 58, was wrecked by a bomb at 12:30 a. m. today. No one was at home at the time of the explosion. Damage is estimated at $2,000.

DOCTOR BATTLES BURGLAR FOUND LOOTING OFFICE

Dr. Clifford L. Evans turned the tables on a burglar and routed him yesterday with a blast from a double barreled shotgun after surprising the intruder in the act of ransacking his office and home at 1128 Argyle street. The burglar met the doctor at the door with a gun, but the doctor leaped at him nevertheless and struggled for possession of the weapon. In the scuffle the burglar fired two shots, both of which missed Evans. The doctor then seized his shotgun and fired both barrels as the burglar was about to leap out a second floor window. A check of hospitals was made in the belief that the burglar had been hit and would seek medical aid.

Despondent for some months because of severe headaches, Mrs. Moore went to the cellar, removed outer clothing and piled it near the furnace, relatives said. She ten poured kerosene over herself and applied a match.

SEE ROOSEVELT POLITICAL COUP IN U. S. SPENDING

Foes Seek Reason for His Popularity.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt's hold on the people continues the prime wonder of the time in the eyes of the politicians.

They were prepared for the usual political honeymoon accorded a new President. But when it comes to a honeymoon lasting already more than ten months and still going strong, they began to feel they are in the presence of something they don't quite understand.

In the last few days there have been suggestions that the honeymoon is possibly nearing an end.

Majority Seems Shaky.

The colossal Democratic majority in the house split on the gag rule preventing amendment of economy provisions of appropriation bills and the rule was adopted by a margin of only five votes. It was a close call for the administration, but the politicians are wary of making any predictions based thereon.

From the partisan point of view Republican leaders are discomfited with the situation. Democratic leaders, vastly enjoying the discomfiture of their rivals, continuously enlarge upon the thesis that the President is popular because he is trying to pull the country out of the depression and is succeeding. Slowly reviving business, of which there is much evidence, they attribute wholly to the President's recovery program.

Call Recovery Natural.

Republican leaders believe that business is reviving in spite of retarding influences flowing from the NRA, the AAA, and other manifestations of the New Deal, and the fears and uncertainties produced by the President's monetary experiments. But few of them are saying so for publication for a number of reasons.

For one thing, senators and congressmen interpret the sentiment of their constituencies as insistent that the President be given an unfettered chance to make good his promise to restore prosperity.

But more important is the evidence that the silence that is golden which is being maintained by Republicans bears a close relation to the golden spell cast upon the country by the magician in the White House. Mr. Roosevelt has waved his wand and the rock of the treasury has gushed forth a golden flood, the reviving drops of which are percolating into every comunity in the country.

Given What They Want.

Almost every senator and congressman has been to the White House, to the Public Works administration, to the Relief administration, to the Civil Works administration, to the Reconstruction Finance corporation, to the Farm Credit administration, to the Home Loan board, and to numerous other dispensers of recovery billions seeking for his state or district generous allotments of easy money. Almost all of them have got what they wanted, or a large measure of it. Almost all of them are seeking further allotments of the funds now being disbursed and will soon be scrambling for slices of the huge appropriations yet to be made by congress at this session. Few of them deem it wise to affront the powers that be with criticism under such circumstances.

Nor would their constituents, these senators and congressmen are convinced have them do other otherwise. What people are chiefly thinking about is getting a goodly share of the benefits flowing from the distribution of government money. They are not thinking much about the cost of it all, except that in the redistribution of wealth Mr. Roosevelt has promised somebody else will be made to foot the bill. They do not reflecting that when income taxes to meet the huge government deficits are passed on to consumers in increased cost of living everybody will be footing the bill.

McNary's Case Sample.

But just now the golden spell is on the country. Twenty-two million people already are getting a living wholly or in part from the federal treasury. The number is increasingly daily. Now it is one out of every five persons. Soon it will be one out of every four—about as many as there are families in the country.

Take the case of Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon, Republican leader of the senate, whose caution in opposing the President has occasioned widespread comment. The fact is that his attitude reflects the attitude of his constituents. They would not have him do otherwise. He got for them a huge slice of public works funds, for which they are grateful, and they would not have him spoil their chances of getting more.

Out in Oregon and Washington the big objective is to get the federal government to finance a vast development of the Columbia river and allied projects which will cost several hundred million dollars. When the 3 billion dollar emergency public works fund was created last summer the northwest set out to get part of it for the Columbia river. But Public Works Administrator Ickes was cool to the project. It didn't look practical to him either from the viewpoint of navigation or development of water power for which there would not be any great consumer demand for generations or reclamation of arid lands with too much land already in cultivation.

Columbia River Row.

Gen. Charles H. Martin [Dem., Ore.] and other northwestern Democrats, labored with Mr. Ickes, but all in vain. The most encouragement he gave them was to talk vaguely of letting them have $250,000 for a re-survey of the project. By the middle of September a crisis in the affair had developed and the promoters of the Columbia river project were on the verge of apoplexy.

The situation was desperate. They appealed, as a last resort, to a Republican—Senator McNary—to go and get the bacon from this Democratic administration. The senator was resting under doctor's orders on his Salem farm when a delegation of Columbia river boosters arrived to tell him that he must arise from his sick bed to save the day for the northwest.

The senator answered the call of his constituents. He sped to Washington. He laid the matter before President Roosevelt personally. The President was affable, understanding, and sympathetic. How much money did Senator McNary think would be a fair allotment from the public works fund for the Columbia river development. Mr. McNary thought 20 millions would be about right. The senator was bade to dismiss the matter from his mind. The President would attend to it personally.

Senator McNary departed, and the next day Mr. Ickes allotted twenty millions to the Columbia river.

Ice Jam Threatens Susquehanna River Bridges

Bridges, homes and factories along the Susquehanna river in York county, Pa., are threatened with destruction by the largest ice jam in many years. At some places the ice gorge has reached a height of 20 feet, giving the appearance of arctic icebergs. This picture shows one of the bridges threatened by the ice pack and the rising ice formations. EXPANDED INTERNAL MARKET NRA AIM, SAYS MISS PERKINS

One of the prime aims of the new deal is to build an internal market for the country's production, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins told an audience of 3,500 in the First Congregational Church of Oak Park last night. She was the guest of the Rev. Albert Buckner Coe, pastor. Following the conclusion of her speech she left for Washington.

"The new deal," Secretary Perkins said, "is working to bring the country's workers and industries to a point where consumption will keep pace with production. In these days of potential surpluses in world markets, it is necessary to build an internal market. Leisure and adequate income for workers are needed to bring this about."

"In 1929 the purchasing power of the farmer and of the urban worker was estimated at 11 billions each, a total of 22 billions. In 1932 each had a buying power of only 5 billions, a total of 10 billions. The difference between the 1929 total of 22 billions and the 1932 figure of 10 billions is the difference between prosperity and depression. The administration aims to build up this difference."

HENRY DIXEY NEAR DEATH FROM A FALL DOWN CAFE STAIRWAY

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Barely recovered from an accident in which his arm had been broken three weeks ago, Henry E. Dixey, matinee idol of the eighties, fractured his skull tonight in a fall against a stairway. He was taken to Bellevue hospital where he was reported near death. He was 75 years old on Jan. 6.

With his right arm still in a sling from the previous accident, the veteran actor left his room in the Times Square hotel to have dinner. As he reached the bottom of a flight of cafe steps he became dizzy and fell against the stairs. Those who saw him fall found he was unconscious.

Famous as the star of "Adonis," which set a record of 619 performances in 1884, Mr. Dixey was noted for his manners and his chivalrous attitude.

In a birthday interview last week Mr. Dixey said that his spiritual age was 25, and that he was looking forward to "dancing under a cold shower" when his arm was removed from the sling.

ARBITERS SEEK MILK WAR PEACE IN NIGHT SESSION

Confer with Both Sides; Seeking Cut.

The newly created milk arbitration board held an overtime conference with milk producers and dealers at the Palmer house last night in an effort to settle the differences between the two groups arising out of last week's milk strike.

The principal duty of the board will be to set an equitable price that is to be paid to the farmers for milk. It is expected the board's decision will be given not later than Wednesday.

Study Cost to Consumer.

Although the members of the board are not empowered to fix or suggest a retail milk price, they said yesterday they would consider the effect of any farm price they fix upon the ultimate cost to the consumer. It is anticipated that the price of delivered milk will be reduced from the present rate of 11 cents a quart to 10, or possibly 9 cents.

Members of the arbitration board are Fred W. Sargent, president of the North Western railroad; Clifford V. Gregory, editor of the Prairie Farmer; and W. D. Hunnicutt, market expert for the French-Bauer dairy of Cincinnati. Mr. Sargent, who presided, is the neutral member of the board. Mr. Gregory represents the farmers, and Mr. Hunnicutt the dealers.

Farley Lasts Till Midnight.

The conference opened at 9 o'clock yesterday morning, and continued until midnight. A further session is to be held today when a half dozen independent farmers who could not appear last night will be heard. The main body of dealers and producers was heard yesterday. Represented were both the organized and independent dealers and farmers.

Dr. Fred D. Walmsley, chairman of the Milk Council, Inc., which includes the large distributors, presented his side first. He was followed by John Laue, head of the Chicago Milk Dealers' association, representing the smaller dealers. Then representatives of five independent dairies submitted their case. The producers, independent and organized, produced their arguments together. Don N. Geyer, manager; Henry Pfister, president, and A. M. Krahl, publicity director, spoke for the organized producers, members of the Pure Milk association.

The independent dairy companies were reported to have served notice on the board that they held certain misgivings about the arbitration. Joseph R. Roche, attorney for the Meadowmoor company, one of the largest cut rate firms, said he doubted that arbitration was the solution.

Amending Injunction.

Later Attorney Roche said that he is preparing to amend injunction proceedings that he instituted in federal court in behalf of Meadowmoor last week to make the action permanent against interference with Meadowmoor shipments.

Farmers have been getting $2.10 a hundredweight, [4.5] cents a quart]. The dealers demand a drastic reduction. The farmers during the strike agreed to a slight decrease. Their big insistence is that independent farmers must be paid the same price that organized farmers receive.

BUT 404 MILLION OF BIG PWA FUND ACTUALLY SPENT

All Allocated; Industry Is Given Little Cash.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Of the huge flood of federal easy money which was to start the wave of recovery and for which congress provided by setting up the 3 billion 300 million dollar public works fund, barely 404 million dollars has trickled into business channels, an investigation revealed today.

All of the 3 billion 300 million has been allocated by Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, who is also public works administrator, but only 404 million dollars in cash has actually been paid out.

For every dollar allotted by Secretary Ickes just 12 cents has been spent. And of this 12 cents, 5 has been on civil works, the emergency plan thrown into the breach two months ago when the lag in public works brought down a shower of criticism around the administration's ears.

Ickes Speeds Up Works.

Invoked by the President to rush out the easy money by the millions in the coming six months, Secretary Ickes is lashing the cities, states, counties, railroads, and federal bureaus which have been given easy money allotments to hurry up the closing of their contracts and the spending of money.

Under the schedule laid down for it by the President, the public works administration has to spend more than 1 billion 200 million dollars before June, a goal which requires them to hit a pace of 200 millions a month.

By publishing the names of laggard borrowers from the easy money fund and threatening them with a revocation of their grants, Secretary Ickes has sought to put steam behind the spending and avoid another blast of criticism. He admits that stepping up the rate of expenditures is now the big task before him.

See Relief by Summer.

Not until spring or early summer, however, does the administration hope to get the public works program going strong enough to provide the re-employment relief which was expected to spring up over night when congress voted the huge easy money fund seven months ago.

President Roosevelt expects to keep the civil works program, the crutch on which public works relief has been leaning, in service until May 1. By that time Secretary Ickes hopes to have the cash payments under the public works large enough to keep up the employment pace.

Out of the 404 million dollar cash disbursals under the public works administration thus far, 171 millions have gone for the civil works program. Another 127 millions has gone for the construction of federal aid highways, for which congress definitely earmarked 400 million dollars and over which the public works administration had no control.

Only 106 million dollars of the cash disbursals, therefore, have gone out on projects for which the public works administration has made allotments. The remaining 298 millions was shoveled out for roads or civil works without passing through the labyrinth laid down for projects seeking allotments.

AGENTS ARREST COOK IN EXTORTION PLOT AGAINST OIL CHIEF

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—A plot to extort $25,000 from Gerhardus H. Van Senden, a vice president of the Shell Union Oil corporation, was revealed today following the spectacular arrest Saturday night of Joseph Berecs, 22, a cook who wanted to become a singer.

Scrawled notes threatening death to Mr. Van Senden, cryptic messages in newspapers, and an intensive search of northern New Jersey preceded Berecs' arrest in the Van Senden apartment, in Central Park West.

Thirty agents of the department of justice and detectives of the alien squad, resplendently dressed for the occasion as bell hops, elevator operators, and doormen, trapped Berecs when he came to the apartment to receive a package—ostensibly containing the $25,000 demanded.

STATE WITNESS IN TOUHY CASE ELUDES AGENTS

After three federal agents departed to get a warrant for her arrest, Mrs. Clara Szech, 47 years old, an important witness in the state trial of four Touhy gangsters for the kidnaping of John Factor, fled from a farm near Wisconsin Dells, Wis., Saturday, it was learned last night. The trial of the four gangsters is scheduled to start tomorrow in Judge Michael Feinberg's court in the Criminal Court building.

The agents found Mrs. Szech at the farm of Edward Rexes, 14 miles north of Wisconsin Dells, where she and her son have been stopping for the last month, it was said. She became hysterical and refused to accompany the agents because they had no warrant, according to police there.

When the agents returned from Friendship, Wis., with a warrant they found that Mrs. Szech, her son, and a brother-in-law had left the farm. Rexes was held for questioning. He said he formerly lived in Des Plaines, where he was a neighbor of the Szech family, and did not know she was being sought. She remarked that she did not want to appear in the Touhy trial, he said.

According to investigators, Mrs. Szech was hired by Roger Touhy to cook for the gang while Factor was a prisoner. She quit the job when she learned of the criminal activities of the household in Glenview, where he was held, it was said.

Preliminary sketching of a portrait of Mayor Kelly was begun yesterday by Jo Rollo, Chicago painter and one of the unemployed artists put to work under the Public Works Art Project. The first sitting was at the mayor's home. When completed the oil painting will be hung in the city hall and will be supplemented later with portraits of the late Anton Cermak and other mayors of Chicago. Rollo studied at the Chicago Art institute.

Inquest Today in Tragic Death of Berwyn Couple

An inquest will be held at 11 a. m. today in the funeral parlors at 5617 Cermak road over the bodies of Joseph Holub, 60 years old, and his wife, Anna, 58 years old, who were found dead Saturday night in their home at 2516 Euclid avenue, Berwyn.

Dougherty Expects Conviction.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty, who is chief of the prosecution staff, said he has no doubt he will be able to prove Dr. Wynekoop guilty of the "operating room murder." Yesterday Mr. Dougherty was preparing a draft of the opening statement he expects to make this morning—a forty-five minute address to the jury in which the state will outline its theory of the slaying.

If Prosecutor Dougherty makes any reference to the confession of Dr. Wynekoop in his opening statement to the jury Attorney Smith said he would present an immediate objection. The confession that she fired a bullet into Rheta's body after her daughter-in-law had died from an overdose of chloroform was made by the physician at Fillmore police station a day or so after her arrest. Later Dr. Wyenkoop repudiated the signed statement.

Expect Legal Battle.

A battle is expected over the admissibility of the confession. The state contends it was made voluntarily by the physician after she and her son, Earle, husband of Rheta, had been questioned for nearly twenty-four fours. The state is prepared to show Dr. Wynekoop appeared at the inquest and reaffirmed the confession.

At the inquest Attorney Frank Tyrrell, who is assisting Attorneys W. W. and Milton D. Smith in the defense, advised Dr. Wynekoop not to testify. Instead, the prosecutor recalled, Dr. Wynekoop said she wished to tell the truth and declared that the confession read by Supervising Police Captain John Stege was "in substance" what she had told the authorities concerning Rheta's death.

Because of her statement, made in the presence of the coroner, the coroner's jury and others, and the fact it was made over the objection of her attorney, Prosecutor Dougherty said he could see no reason why Dr. Wynekoop's confession should not be given to the jury in its entirety.

Plan to Stress Insurance.

Prosecutor Dougherty intends to stress the insurance which Dr. Wynekoop took out on Rheta's life. After being turned down by insurance examiners Rheta was given treatment by the mother-in-law and in time was able to obtain a small policy. After further medical care a $10,000 policy was written on the girl's life with the mother-in-law as beneficiary. This policy was taken out a few days before Rheta's death.

Dr. Wynekoop's hope of freedom, it was said, rests in the belief the state will be unable to prove murder. There were no eye witnesses to the crime and if the confession is not given the jury any statements now made by Dr. Wynekoop would go uncontradicted.

Attorney Smith had not decided yesterday whether to make an opening statement. He will be guided by what Dougherty tells the jury, he said.

BIGELOW'S DAUGHTER IS KILLED BY BLOW OF HORSE'S HEAD ON FARM

Lincoln, Mass., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Miss Elizabeth Bryant Bigelow, 24, socially prominent daughter of Dr. Henry B. Bigelow, Harvard scientist, was injured fatally in a peculiar accident today while she was examining a colt on the estate of Charles Francis Adams, former secretary of the navy.

Miss Bigelow was standing beside the colt when it suddenly swung its head, striking her on the head in such a way that she suffered an internal hemorrhage. She died shortly after being removed to the house.

She had graduated from the exclusive Windsor school at Boston and from Bryn Mawr, and was associated with the Fogg museum of art at Harvard.

Two years ago, her brother, Henry B. Jr., was killed on Mount Washington, N. H., while attempting the climb.

TRY POLITICAL WORKER ON RAPE CHARGE TODAY

Bart Riley, 32 years old, 8009 Ellis avenue, a Democratic political worker, will be arraigned today on charges of assault and attempted rape before Municipal Judge William E. Helander in the South Chicago court. He is at liberty, having been freed on an unscheduled bond by Municipal Judge Matthew D. Hartigan, who explained yesterday that Riley's political friends had told him that the charges were unfounded.

The alleged victim is Gladys Armstrong, 25 years old, 750 East 80th street, a checkroom girl who came here from St. Louis to work for an exhibitor at the World's Fair. Last Sunday night, Miss Armstrong said, Riley was waiting in the hallway of her home when she arrived. He had been drinking and was armed with a revolver, she asserted.

Riley then allegedly forced her to accompany him to a cafe and later to his apartment. There he beat her and attempted to attack her, she said, but she escaped when he fell into a stupor. The girl declared she afterward was confined to bed for two days. On Thursday she signed a complaint and Riley was arrested.

Among those who intervened for Riley was State Representative John G. Ryan of the 13th district, who has known him for 16 years.

Reports $3,000 Jewelry, Clothing Stolen from Auto

Dr. Andrew McNally Jr. of the Edgewater Beach apartments, 5555 Sheridan road, last night reported to police that thieves had taken clothing and jewelry valued at $3,000 from his automobile while it was parked near Michigan boulevard and Eighth street. The physician and his wife, who were attending a theater at the time of the theft, said the valuables had been placed in the car in readiness for a trip Thursday. They will not change their plans to go to New York and there embark on a cruise to California via the Panama canal, he said.

MUSICIAN SHOT IN HOLDUP.

Sidney Robertson, 28 years old, 6419 Normal boulevard, a saxophone player, was wounded in the left foot last night when he was struck by a bullet fired accidentally by one of two bandits who had just robbed him of $7 in front of 7744 Phillips avenue.

RETRIAL OF FIVE STONE OFFICIALS TO START TODAY

The retrial of five former officials of H. O. Stone & Co., defunct $14,000,000 Chicago real estate investment concern, will be started this morning in the federal court of Judge Philip L. Sullivan.

A venire of 50 names, half of an original venire of 100, which was impaneled to hear the federal government's evidence against the late Moe Rosenberg, will be in the jury box for call.

The defendants are Henry S. Norcutt, president; Harold D. Bennett, vice president; Charles D. Packer Jr., treasurer; W. Scott Carroll, controller, and Leslie A. Needham, general counsel.

After a jury found them guilty of using the mails to defraud on Jan. 6, 1933, Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward sentenced each of the defendants to serve 20 years in Leavenworth penitentiary and to pay $15,000 in fines.

After spending several days in jail the defendants took their cases to the federal Circuit Court of Appeals, and were released on $50,000 bail each. Judges of the Appeals court granted them a new trial on a defense contention that the trial court had excluded admissible relevant defense testimony.

The company, whose business the defendants conducted, was one of the oldest real estate investment houses in Chicago. It had been in business more than 95 years.

DRIVES 2 GUNMEN 160 MILES UNDER THREAT OF DEATH

John T. Devine, 18 years old, 5201 North Meridian street, Indianapolis, was on his way back home yesterday after being forced to drive two armed men 160 miles to Chicago during the early morning hours. Police thought the two gunmen might be connected with the Dillinger gang, but the boy was unable to identify photographs in the rogue's gallery.

Devine, a student at Cathedral High school, told police that the two men forced their way into his automobile at the point of a gun while he waited in his home city for a traffic light to change. He had just driven his mother home from his father's ballroom and was returning at 2:30 a. m. to pick up the latter.

Devine reached Chicago with his uninvited passengers at 3:15 a. m. yesterday. The men jumped out of the car at 83d street and South Shore drive, ordering him to drive on. He found a policeman who took him to the detective bureau.

Three Take Poison, but It's Merely a Holdup

Two men and a young woman held up the drug store at 501 North Wells street last night, stealing $100 and a quantity of narcotics and arsenic. Police were puzzled over the theft of the arsenic. Victims of the holdup were Jacob Braude, store owner, and Peter Beck, his clerk.

OUR MENTAL AGE SAID TO AVERAGE 17.7 YEARS NOW

Binet Level Is Too Low, Expert Says.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Americans may all expand their chests today and strut proudly, for a leading bureaucrat of the federal government has just exploded a libelous and scurrilous myth about American mentality.

During the world war, as men entered the military forces of the United States, many thousands of them were given intelligence tests. They piled blocks; were given simple mathematical problems; wrote answers to questions on general information, many of which sounded very silly.

But to the scientists who had charge of these examinations the questions were not nearly so silly as the answers in many instances. Their announced deduction, from all their material, was that the average intelligence of American soldiers, and therefore of all adult Americans, was that of 12 year olds.

French Yardstick Accepted.

This rating was under the method of calculation set up by Alfred Binet, noted French psychologist, a method universally accepted as a yardstick of mental processes. So ever since the war the American public was forced to smart under the disgrace of being a nation of 12 year olds.

But now comes Dr. David Segal, with the impressive title of "expert on educational tests and measurements in the office of education of the department of the interior," and he brings redemption of the American mind.

Dr. Segal is bearer of the gladsome tidings that in his opinion the average mental age of American men and women is 17.7 years, which would make this a land of high school seniors as compared with the previous rating of sixth and seventh graders. Only 5 per cent of American adults have a mental rating below 12 years, Dr. Segal says.

Assails Binet's System.

Writing in School Life, official monthly journal of the federal office of education, Dr. Segal rejects the Binet test despite its long years of acceptance, and he charges that Binet's system "underrates adult intelligence."

The doctor, who has not yet been noticed by the editors of Who's Who in America, does not explain just what substitute he has devised for the Binet test. But he apparently has adopted various ratings of his own.

"Later researches," writes Dr. Segal, after rejecting Binet, "have shown positively that the intelligence of adults of this country will average considerably above that of 12 year olds."

Rises Sharply For Time.

Defining intelligence as "the growth and decline of the ability to learn" and using "research studies of typical cross-sections of American society," Dr. Segal finds that intelligence "rises rather sharply until about the age of 15 or 16, then rises less and less sharply until about the age of 22 or 23."

"From this age," the expert continues, "the curve begins to drop, at first very slowly, and then more and more precipitously. The mental age of the adults of the early twenties [20-25] is therefore above that of any age group in the teens. At no chronological age level does the average mental age obtained from investigations fall to that of 12 year olds."

Applying his findings to census figures for the number of persons in the age groups between 16 and 50 years of age, Dr. Segal finds that the average mental age of men and women in this country is 17.7.

Missing Plane Safe

WINNIPEG, Man., Jan. 14.—Fay Baker, Chicago fan dancer, and Pilot William "Wop" May arrived today at Winnipegosis, Man., fishing port 170 miles from here on Lake Winnipegosis. They had roughed it beside their disabled plane five days during which search was begun for them.

Fog forced them to land on snow-covered Whiskey Jack island, 20 miles from shore, half an hour after taking off Tuesday from The Pas, for Winnipeg. The undercarriage was broken in landing and May repaired it with small timbers. He got the plane into the air Friday, but again fog forced a landing at Wood Bay, at the lower end of the lake. Yesterday they took off again, and for a third time had to land because of fog, but today dawned clear and they reached Winnipegosis at 11 a. m.

Miss Baker is suffering from nervousness and illness attributed to exposure and an enforced diet of canned food stored on the plane. Their only shelter was a tent and the plane's cabin. Jack Crosby, manager of the company which owns the damaged plane, was forced down Saturday by fog while hunting the lost pair. Crosby said he would fly Miss Baker to Winnipeg Monday.

VALLEE ELUDES SUBPŒNA AND FLEES TO EAST

Denies Trick; Merely Off to Sing in Cafe.

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Eluding a process server who waited for him at a film studio gate, Rudy Vallee, singing orchestra leader, was on his way tonight to New York to fill theatrical engagements and ponder his next move in his tangled marital affairs.

Accompanied by his secretary and Hyman Bushel, New York lawyer, Vallee, who failed to strike a note of harmony in his married life with Fay Webb Vallee, left the studio Saturday, motored to San Bernardino, Cal., and boarded an eastbound train.

Keeps Movements Covered.

He said the separate maintenance action Mrs. Vallee filed against the singer last week had nothing to do with it.

It was generally understood at a movie ball last night that Vallee had hurried by car to Winslow, Ariz., to board the train, but Zagon said the connection was made at San Bernardino.

The process server, H. M. Fleming, attempted to locate Vallee at his hotel and other Los Angeles and Hollywood tarrying places of the singer, but failed. He finally stationed himself at the entrance of the film studio where Vallee and Miss Alice Faye, actress, had been working in a picture.

Wife Seeks Deposition.

Miss Faye is the woman with whom Mrs. Vallee, in her separate maintenance suit, accused the singer of being "intimate on numerous occasions." Miss Faye denied the charge emphatically.

Fleming said he wanted to serve on Vallee a subpœna to appear and submit to a deposition to be used in Mrs. Vallee's action.

Soon after this action was filed in Los Angeles, the New York Appellate court denied Mrs. Vallee's plea for an injunction restraining the crooner from filing a Mexican divorce suit.

The whereabouts of Vallee became a question when he failed to appear as master of ceremonies at a brilliant ball given last night by the Screen Actors' guild. Another singer, Dick Powell, acted in Vallee's stead.

Fleming said he learned the picture, especially the parts in which Vallee appeared, had been hurried to permit the singer to leave a week earlier.

Mrs. Vallee's father, Police Chief Clarence Webb of Santa Monica, reported this evening that a man who gave his name as Joseph Stewart of New York, visited the chief and said he "had a grudge against Vallee." Stewart declared he could get "certain telephonic conversations if they were wanted." Webb said he told the man "not interested."

Webb asserted also that his daughter had declined $3,000 a week to appear at a New York night club opposite Garfield Leon, because "her health would not permit her to accept."

Vallee has produced in court tapped wire records of telephone love chats which he alleges Mrs. Vallee had with Leon.

CARDINAL RECEIVES 72 GOTHAM NEGROES AS CATHOLIC CONVERTS

New York, Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Seventy-two Negro converts, the largest Negro class ever to embrace Roman Catholicism in New York, made their profession of faith today before Cardinal Hayes at the Church of St. Borromeo in Harlem. Participating in such an occasion for the first time, Cardinal Hayes passed out the certificates of membership and bestowed his blessing on the neophytes.

Describing ceremonies he had seen in Rome and other parts of the world, the cardinal told the group that none "ever gave me more pleasure than this."

"I love the colored people for their spirit and devotion," he said. "I have worked and prayed for them."

HUNGER STRIKE PAIR HAVE GOOD CHANCE TO LIVE

NANKING, China, Jan. 15 (Monday.)—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Paul Noulens," the couple without a country," who yesterday abandoned a hunger strike protesting a sentence of life imprisonment, were in a hospital today. Physicians said their chances for recovery were good. Moulens, without food 26 days, was in serious condition when he abandoned his fast. His wife was gaunt and weak after eating nothing for 18 days. They were convicted as arch-communists, and after fruitless pleas for a new trial announced they would fast "unto death." They gave up, however, when convinced that the Chinese authorities would not yield to their demands.

GERMAN PASTORS AGAIN TELL NAZI BISHOP TO RESIGN

Protest Against Rule Read from Pulpits.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—In defiance of Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller's dictatorial decree forbidding pastors to criticize the Nazi Protestant church administration from the pulpits, the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, leader of the rebel Pastors' Emergency league, and other members of the federation today again read a manifesto demanding the primate's resignation.

When the pastors read this manifesto last Sunday no action was taken against them on the ground that the bishop's decree went into effect on Monday. Many uniformed Nazis appeared in churches where the protests were read. They apparently were ordered to attend the opposition services. The police did not interfere with the services in any way.

Up to Church Councils.

Enforcement of Bishop Mueller's decree lies in the hands of the councils of the churches. But during the last week several councils proclaimed a determination not to carry out the bishop's bidding.

Preaching in the Berlin cathedral this morning, the Rev. Dr. Richter—whose advice on church matters is highly valued by President Paul von Hindenburg—declared that "a storm is brewing in Germany—a fight between Christianity and heathendom."

"Just as the totalitarian state has all the claims on the individual while the individual has no claim on the state, so God likewise has all claims on the individual. No peace can be reached until that is recognized."

The Nazi German Christians today continue to express confidence they will emerge victorious in the religious conflict. Their leaders quoted a speech made by Chancellor Hitler last summer in which he praised the German Christian movement.

Celebrate Founding of Reich.

Brilliant uniforms and flags of the old imperial army recalled imperial glories at the Berlin sports palace today as the Kyffhaeuser League of War Veterans met to commemorate the sixty-third anniversary of the birth of the reich. The anniversary falls on next Thursday.

President Paul Von Hindenburg, members of the cabinet, and famous war chiefs, including Field Marshal August Von Mackensen, Alexander Von Kluck, Von Hutier, and Horst Von der Goltz attended. Lieut. Col. Jacob Wuest of the United States army was among the foreign military attachés present.

"The fact that German front soldiers again are able to carry their heads high is due to the Nazi storm troops," said Capt. Ernst Roehm, their chief of staff. "The spirit which planted swastika flags on the bastion of state authority was the heroic, eternal German military spirit. It was the spirit which freed the world of Napoleon. The new Germany needs every man, and particularly every soldier, for the reconstruction of the nation."

Capt. Roehm described Hitler as a "second Bismarck."

"The German people waited under President von Hindenburg's leadership for a day when a new man of Bismarck's greatness would appear," he said. "Hitler came as an unknown soldier, brought comradeship back from the war and planted it in the hearts of the entire German nation."

Nazi Leaders in London.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Jan. 14.—The mysterious appearance in London of three leaders of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's youth movement has precipitated a great outcry in the London press. Herr Nabersberg, who describes himself as head of the department of foreign relations of the youth movement, and two of his assistants comprise the mission. They guardedly say they are in London "to establish contact with British youth."

Apparently mindful of the experience of Hitler's foreign relations expert, Dr. Alfred Rosenberg, who ran afoul of the British press, Nabersberg declined to see reporters, but when the newspapers threatened to play up the mystery angle of his visit he agreed to answer written questions in writing.

"I would be very pleased if some kind of permanent relations between the youth movements of our respective countries could be established," Nabersberg wrote, suggesting reciprocal visits of German and British youths.

"Send them packing," is the response of more than one newspaper. "What would the government do had three gentlemen from soviet Russia come on a similar mission?" asks the Sunday Referee.

CROWD HAILING HITLER DISPERSED BY TROOPS IN AUSTRIAN TYROL

VIENNA, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Troops and gendarmerie were called out today to disperse a Tyrolese sports gathering near Innsbruck when several thousand spectators persisted in shouting "Heil Hitler!" The spectators kept on singing Nazi songs so the district governor summarily called off the remaining sports events. With gendarmes assisting, a battalion of light infantry quelled the demonstration.

The meeting today was preliminary to the opening of the international sports week Jan. 20. The sports week has not yet been called off, but authorities, alarmed at the recent tendency of spectators at all sporting events to turn them into Nazi demonstrations, were reported considering doing so.

At Villach, Carinthia, police uncovered evidence of a Nazi bombing campaign being directed by army officers. First Lieut. Joseph Gollee recently was suspended from active service for alleged Nazi sympathies. He was said to have been the guiding influence of a smoke and noise bomb attack on a meeting of Catholic storm troops.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 13.—(AP)—Methuselah, if alive and well, would have a better chance than almost anyone else of becoming a general in the marine corps.

The reason is that under the present rate of promotions the Biblical character who was reputed to have lived years and years and then some, would be about the only one old enough to attain a general officer's rank after entering the service as a second lieutenant.

Seek Navy System.

Foreseeing a gradual, but increasing lack of promotion in the corps, the marines about seven years ago sought congressional authority to institute a selection system similar to that of the navy, but each congress since then has failed to act on the bill. A move will be made again in the present congress.

The present marine method of promotion is by so-called "normal attrition," for commonly known as "filling a dead man's shoes."

The naval system of promotion is by selection, a number of higher officers being promoted on their records and those passed over a certain number of times retiring voluntarily.

140 Years to Be General.

Statisticians have computed that a young officer, entering the marines at the age of 21, under the present rate of promotion would be a second lieutenant eight years. He would be a first lieutenant twelve years, captain fifty-five years, major twenty-five years, lieutenant colonel eleven years, and colonel eight and one-half years—a total of 140 years before he became eligible for a general's rank.

HORNER AGAIN SEEKING PEACE IN RUM WAR

Favors Committee of All Interests.

BY PARKE BROWN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Attentive observers at Springfield representing a wide range of interests watching the progress or lack of progress of the Illinois liquor control law agree today on one point. That is that the situation when the general assembly reconvenes tomorrow is in the hands of Gov. Horner.

Though he is ill, he is credited with having the power to control the legislature.

Disagree on Committee.

It is conceded that if he so desires Gov. Horner can designate the entire personnel of a conference committee to deal with the liquor bill. He can effect the appointment of an all-Horner committee which will stand by his program to the letter.

It is regarded, however, as more likely he will name a group representative of many conflicting interests as having a better chance of success.

Prospects for Speed Dim.

Neither type of committee is believed to hold forth promise of speedy action. While there are many who say the two houses might be brought together this week, there are others who attach importance to the difficulty of obtaining a two-thirds vote in each chamber even if a conference committee reaches an early agreement.

Some hold that the creation of a committee representing all the important elements will reopen so many questions that even the committee work cannot be finished for two or three days. It is feared that by that time enough legislators may have left so that a two-thirds majority cannot be had.

Senate Bill Largely Changed.

Gov. Horner is considered to control the situation because of the methods by which the membership of a conference committee is chosen. The house of representatives having refused to concur in the senate amendments—in effect an entirely new bill—the program now calls for a meeting of the senate tomorrow morning to act on that message of refusal. Only a quorum is needed for this action. It is taken for granted that the senate, taking up the house communication, will refuse to recede.

Under the law and the rules the senate then will be due to notify the house that it has refused to back up and that it has named a certain number of its members to act as a committee to meet in conference with a similar committee from the house.

In the senate the committee is named by Lieut. Gov. Thomas F. Donovan "with the advice and consent" of the executive committee.

Taxi Driver Shot as He Resists Holdup in Cab

Joseph Age, 40 years old, 5564 Monroe street, driver of a Checker taxicab, was shot and seriously wounded by a Negro robber in front of 312 East 41st street last night. The gunman had boarded the cab a few blocks south, posing as a passenger. When he drew his gun, Age tried to resist. The Negro fired, the bullet hitting the chauffeur in the chest. The Negro escaped. Age was taken to Michael Reese hospital.

SHOT BY FATHER

John Mrowka, 53 years old, 1939 South Sawyer avenue, accidentally shot and seriously wounded his daughter, Jean, 20 years old, yesterday while attempting to commit suicide as he and his family sat at the breakfast table. A few minutes later, while a doctor and members of the family hovered over the unconscious girl, he went into a bathroom and shot himself twice near the heart.

Mrowka, who is unemployed, was brooding over the fact that his son lost his job Saturday. In the midst of his meal he drew a .22 caliber pistol. Both Jean and her brother, Edward, 24 years old, an insurance agent, leaped to seize it. In the struggle the weapon was discharged, the bullet striking the girl in the chest.

At the Bridewell hospital, where Mrowka was taken after he shot himself with a larger revolver, physicians said he would probably die. Jean was taken to St. Anthony's hospital, where it was said she had a good chance to recover. She is a graduate of St. Mary's High school.

FIND OLIVER MOROSCO, RETIRED PRODUCER, IN COMA ON STREET

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Bruised and shaken, Oliver Morosco Fendler, a retired theatrical producer better known as Oliver Morosco, was found unconscious on a street today, the victim, police said, of a mysterious attack or an "unaccountable accident."

The 53 year old producer, known for his connection with "Abie's Irish Rose," told authorities and hospital physicians he lost consciousness as he walked down a boulevard, either as a result of a fall or having been struck a severe blow.

His face was injured, authorities said, and his pockets appeared to have been rifled. He was given treatment in the hospital and then taken home. He said he did not see an assailant. Physicians said there were no signs of a heart attack.

A decade ago Fendler came to Los Angeles from New York, planning to construct a "Dream theater" which never was completely materialized. He did produce plays in Pacific coast theaters.

Last year he announced he hoped to return to the theater business in 1934 with a show house of his own and a producing stock company.

HOOVER JR. TELLS OF ATTEMPT TO RESIGN IN 1930

Mails Senate Group a Complete Report.

Pasadena, Cal., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Herbert Hoover Jr., son of the former President, today disclosed that he sought to resign from his post as chief engineer of the Western Air Express in 1930 to forestall any criticism in the form of connecting his name or that of his father with air mail contracts.

Hoover said he mailed to the United States senate special committee investigating mail contracts a complete report on the subject yesterday.

This showed that in August, 1930, he anticipated that accusations of wrongful action would be made against Postmaster General Brown.

Ordered to Reserve Post.

He was chief engineer of the Western Air Express in 1930, when in August of that year he was ordered for a month's duty as a reserve lieutenant in the army air corps.

"At the physical examination for that service," his letter to the committee sets forth, "it was discovered that I required treatment for tuberculosis and, as a result, I spent a year in the Rapidan camp and at Asheville, N. C.

"Shortly after entering treatment, Secretary Hurley informed me that a man named Haliburton was stating in Washington that I was using my relationships to promote air mail contracts. I had no part nor any knowledge of this end of the business, and have never discussed it in any form with any public official.

"Yet, as these statements were intended to damage my father, I immediately resigned from the company by a letter to its president and sent a copy of my resignation to the postmaster general."

Resignation Letter Quoted.

In the letter of resignation to President Harris M. Hanshue, president of the Western Air Express, under date of Aug. 25, 1930, young Hoover wrote:

"Would-be competitors for this contract have already launched slanderous innuendoes to the press even in advance of the opening of the bids, to the effect that the contract will be given to the company as a matter of favoritism, because of my employment by the company.

"I should it be found that the Western Air Express possesses the qualifications for the service, makes the lowest bid, and is awarded the contract by the postmaster general, then every slimy politician, every scandal monger, and every character assassin in the country will rise to defame the honored name I bear, and accuse the postmaster general of wrongful action. It will be used to prejudice the interest of the company."

Refused to Accept.

He said that while the company refused to accept his resignation, he was given a leave of absence and spent a year in a sanitorium.

Recently, he said, he returned to a full time basis of $400 per month with the company.

"As to your questions," he wrote to the committee, "as to whether I have received or been allotted for services any option, rights, bonuses, gratuities, or stock in connection with any aviation corporation, the answer is unreservedly 'no,' and this includes my wife or any other person.

"I have never made any political contribution.

"I did at one time in 1929, as an investment from my own savings, buy in the open market about 350 shares in the Western Air Express and subsequently sold them.

No Interest Since.

"During this period of the mail contract I did not even hold this small interest, nor have I held any since.

"I have no other financial relations with the industry in any form."

He disclosed that his salary in 1929 began with the Western Air Express at $200 per month and was increased to $466 per month by 1930, when he held the position of chief engineer.

Blast Hurts Sixteen Near U. S. Military Reservation

Fort Knox, Ky., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Sixteen persons were injured today when a dynamite bomb explosion damaged a lunch room at the edge of the Fort Knox military reservation. Most of the injured were customers.

None was seriously hurt.

Joins Unethical Conduct Investigation.

Attorney Stephen Love, chairman of the grievance committee of the Illinois State Bar association, sent a telegram to Gov. Horner yesterday offering the services of the association in an investigation of unethical conduct by lawyers in taking fees from convicts on the pretense of helping them to get paroles. On Saturday the governor directed that disbarment proceedings be launched against Attorneys Charles Daly, Edward J. O'Hara, and Irving I. Sian for taking such fees.

"At the suggestion of Floyd Thompson, president of the Illinois State Bar association, we herewith offer to join in an immediate and thorough investigation of unethical actions of lawyers in connection with pardon and parole applications," the telegram read.

Case Involves Veteran.

The case that drew Gov. Horner's fire involved Roman Hempel, a disabled war veteran sentenced in 1929 for manslaughter and since paroled. An investigation by George T. Scully, state superintendent of supervision of paroles, and Joseph P. Burke, parole agent, resulted in a report outlining the actions of the three lawyers in obtaining money from Hempel.

"I am not worried about the investigation," Attorney Daly said yesterday. "I made several trips to Joliet and Springfield in Hempel's behalf."

Sian Defends His Conduct.

Attorney Sian said he had made a complete statement to the state's attorney's office about his work in the case. "My conduct was ethical in every way," he said, "and I made every effort to obtain Hempel's release."

Attorney O'Hara could not be reached last night for a statement.

BREAK INTO CARD GAME AND SLAY ONE OF PLAYERS

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Gangland assassins broke into a card game today and carefully and deliberately killed Angelo "Angie" Pezzulo, 29.

Pezzulo, his two brothers and two other men were playing the last hand of a long card session in the back room of a candy store. Two men entered. One of them drew a revolver and commanded the players to line up, faces against the wall.

The armed man walked along the line, turning faces and scrutinizing them carefully. He stopped behind Pezzulo and shot him twice, below the heart and in the head.

Police said that Pezzulo was collector for a "policy" ring and that underworld business rivals had eliminated him from competition. He had a lengthy police record.

MAYOR KELLY'S TRACTION FIGHT PRAISED BY CLUB

A resolution thanking Mayor Kelly for his "gallant and courageous fight on behalf of three million car riders by bringing the promise of unification between the elevated railway and the surface lines" was adopted last night at a meeting of the West Montrose Improvement club in the Gladstone park fieldhouse at 3000 Addison street.

Ald. Walter J. Orlikoski [25th] told the meeting that "Mayor Kelly has made more progress in the last three months on the traction question than all of the aldermen have done in the last three years." Others attending the meeting were Aldermen James C. Moreland, James J. Hurley, Henry J. Wieland, and State Representative Raymond T. O'Keefe of the 20th Senatorial district.

ORDER U. S. REDS TO WRECK PLANS OF ROOSEVELT

Tribune Gets a Copy of Edict from Moscow.

Coincidentally with the departure of Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinov from Moscow on Oct. 26, on the trip to Washington that resulted in U. S. recognition of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, THE TRIBUNE'S Baltic bureau received a copy of the journal of the "Red International Trade Unions." That journal attacked President Roosevelt's recovery program and urged the communist party in the United States to "agitate for liquidation of the depression through a revolution."

Donald Day, THE TRIBUNE'S correspondent, in dispatches from Riga, Latvia, dated Oct. 26 and Oct. 29, revealed this embarrassing slip of the usually vigilant bolshevik censorship and the subsequent efforts of the soviet foreign office to suppress the issue shortly after 6,355 copies had been distributed.

Gets Copy of Journal.

Printing of these dispatches brought forth some protests of their veracity and the authenticity of the document referred to. THE TRIBUNE has now received in Chicago an actual copy of the journal bearing the imprint of two official organizations which mark it as an official publication of the soviet government.

This issue of the journal was published on Oct. 13, after President Roosevelt's letter to Moscow on Oct. 10 on the subject of conversations dealing with recognition and before President Mikhail Kalinin's reply of acceptance, dated Oct. 17. This correspondence was made public in Washington on Oct. 20.

The "Contents" page contains the authorization of the "glavit" No. B. 67352 and "partisdat," No. 929. "Glavit" is the head literary department of the soviet commissariat of education. In other words, it is the official soviet government censorship, whose stamp makes this an official publication of the government. "Partisdat" is the communist party department of publications, which also is a censorship board, thus making this an official publication of the all-Russian communist party.

Calls Roosevelt "Socialist."

The article in question is headed: "The working class in the United States and their benefactor [the] Socialist Roosevelt." It was written by one "Kiten." The article labels supporters of the Roosevelt régime as "social Fascists." It uses the term in the sense of an anathema and epithet, and describes NRA legislation as "chiefly directed against the proletariat and laboring masses."

Analyzing the program, the article says anti-trust laws are canceled for two years, "which means that large monopolies will swallow small capitalists, and means the formation of conditions better suited to realize dumping policies abroad."

"The law means nothing less than a further harsh decrease in the living standard of the proletariat, a régime of semi-military labor, of fixed wages and hours of work, prohibition of strikes, and existence of revolutionary organizations," the article continues.

"The maximum labor week—30 to 40 hours—is in reality legalization of the stagger system, an attempt to split the working class through transferring the difficulties and problems of the idle to the still employed workmen.

Says U. S. Prepares for War.

"If we glance at the law about unemployment we note that the largest part of the 3 billion dollars assigned for public works is designed to strengthen the American armaments—airplanes, barracks, mechanization and motorization. A further $230,000,000 is assigned for naval building. Between 250,000 and 300,000 men are sent to military camps where they are being trained by 4,500 army officers. From the camps they will be transferred to the 'civilian defense corps.'

"All these measures: military training, increasing armaments, the militarization of labor, the formation of newly trained military cadres from the unemployed, is a gigantic step forward towards the preparation of a new bloody war. The depression and the growing imperialistic contradictions incline the bourgeoisie of the U. S. A. to prepare for an imperialistic war. Lately it dreams openly of prosperity during war time, also about the possibility which war gives to liquidate the 'unrest' among the working classes."

"Cruel Attack on Workers."

The article then declares "Roosevelt's entire 'salvation' program is a cruel attack against the working class." It lists the high points of the program as follows:

"1. Strengthening financial capital, subsidizing trusts and banks at the expense of imposing new taxes upon the broad masses of the population.

"2. Trustification of industry will lead to shutting down a large number of unprofitably and little profitable undertakings, leading to a new wave of rationalization, that is, placing further pressure upon employed workers.

"3. A fresh increase in the cost of living, increase of the price of agricultural products benefiting banks and larger farmers; liquidation of subsidies to the idle, introduction of forced labor and military camps.

"4. Disorganization of the working class through the most shameless demagoguery and base trickery by the formation of company unions which are really organizations under the control of the employers, and through direct terroristic methods, such as prohibition of strikes and destruction of real proletarian organizations.

How Blue Eagle Is Described.

The writer describes the NRA blue eagle as "a special propaganda organization with large financial support." Senator Elmer Thomas of Oklahoma is called "leader of the left wing of the social-fascist group." William Green is called "the reactionary leader of the American Federation of Labor" who "attempts to utilize the NRA to extend the influence of the A. F. of L.," and "tries to convince the bourgeoisie that his federation will continue, as before, to fulfill their requirements."

The article continues:

"Dissatisfied workers have voiced their sympathy for our revolutionary unions, announcing their intention to join them. . . . This is how the laboring class of the U. S. A. reacts to the measures of its 'benefactor,' Roosevelt, and these facts disclose the demogogical truth about the 'socialistic' plans of Roosevelt. This is the answer of the workers to the NRA.

"The further activity of the working class of the U. S. A., which has a tendency to grow, undoubtedly depends upon the activity of the revolutionary organizations; how these will understand how to penetrate and utilize this mass movement, to prepare, train and lead it towards class warfare. The objective conditions for this become more favorable. The masses must be convinced that the real burden of the crisis is being transferred from the shoulders of the bourgeoisie to the back of the laboring class and wide masses of workers."

Drawing conclusions from the 1933 midyear statistics, the article describes the Roosevelt program as being of "temporary recovery and of speculative character." Then it goes on to say:

"The communist party and the revolutionary Trade Union International must be the only organizer and leader of the turbulent North American proletariat in their approaching battles. They have already appeared before the masses as the only practical and possible leaders in their fight against the latest attack of the bourgeoisie. Although the revolutionary organizations have been delayed in properly orientating themselves in this new situation, they have developed a wide campaign against the program of Roosevelt.

"The Trade Union Unity league is now paying more attention to the organization of the conflict. It is necessary that the Trade Union Unity league should disclose the plans of our enemies, increase and improve their agitation and give it political continuity. Large delegations must be elected which will coöperate with the revolutionary unions in protecting their interests in dealing with government institutions and exposing the moves of the employers and the A. F. of L. In inciting the masses to conflicts and to strikes the Trade Union Unity league must strengthen their leading rôle.

Urges Larger Organizations.

"Following the proposed recruiting campaign, the Red unions should greatly enlarge their staffs and try to form a series of new local organizations. Such a program is of special importance in heavy industry and special industrial centers such as mining and metal."

The journal's article concludes with long and detailed instructions which are in effect orders of the Red Trade Union International in Moscow to its representatives and followers in the United States:

"Our project of a united front needs a more concentrated revolutionary agitation and oppositionary propaganda in all larger American unions. The proletariat enlisted in the A. F. of L. and other 'reformist' unions must be won over to our side. This is an important task. Boring from within through developing this opposition propaganda and the formation of strong revolutionist groups in 'reformist' organizations will be our chief source of new members.

Told to Dispel "Smoke Screen."

"The recent activities of the league and the Red unions reveal they have a proper understanding of their special problems. These consist of dispelling the illusions of the masses concerning Roosevelt's program; assisting them to understand present conditions; to dispel the smoke screen spread by the bourgeoisie, the A. F. of L. and the Socialist party.

"It is also necessary to intensify the dissatisfaction of the workers with the realization of Roosevelt's measures. Through forming the united front from below [i. e., organizing the 'down and outers'] and agitating for a program of popular demands for measures against Roosevelt's program of hunger and poverty and oppression, the league and Red unions must utilize the present dissatisfaction for a tremendous battle of the United States' proletariat.

Penetrate Cities! Reds Told.

"Our revolutionary trade unions must use all the opportunities opened by the present conditions and by the tendency of the workers to organize to penetrate the chief industrial regions, large cities and increase our influence there.

"The practical work of our American organizations in recent years has shown, that even while they understand their duties, still they have not always been able to carry out the accepted resolutions [which come from Moscow]. This leads us to fear that just now our organizations will not be sufficiently energetic in seizing the present opportunities and our program will not be carried out to the end.

"It must be remembered, that under present conditions, the demagogy of the bourgeoisie and social fascists and the illusions spread by them among the masses prepare the ground for the spread of opportunism [which means any deviation from the policies laid down by Moscow] in the Red unions, revolutionary trade unions and their locals. Already there are signs of underestimating the influence of the A. F. of L. and absence of understanding its rôle as counter agent of the bourgeoisie in carrying out the new hunger and poverty program and its ambition to liquidate the Red unions. There is also the danger of using methods of work which will antagonize the masses against our organizations.

Assails Dilatory Tactics.

"The dangerous dilatory tactics of the revolutionary organizations when they are faced by increasingly favorable conditions for seizing control of a revolutionary trade union movement in the United States, must be stopped. There must be a definite fight against all kinds of opportunism and against the right deviation which is the chief danger.

"Only through following the correct policies, unhesitatingly carrying out decisions, expelling everything old and conservative which is hindering the work, overcoming the 'left' and 'right' opportunism and mistakes and by dividing of the masses through combating the bureaucratic elements of the internal life of trade union opposition groups can the Trade Union International unions become a mass movement.

"Only under the leadership of the communist party, can they become the leaders of the fight of the working class of the United States against the plans of Roosevelt; against preparations for an imperialistic war, and for the protection of the U. S. S. R., and finally to combine the everyday demands of the workers with the final aim of the class war of the proletariat and to agitate for the liquidation of the depression through a revolution."

FRENCH PRESS FIGHTS MOVE TO CURB FREEDOM

Restrictions Follow Bond Scandal Disclosures.

PARIS, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A call to defend "freedom of the press" was sounded today in many French newspapers. They charged that increasing press restrictions are embodied in censorship measures of Premier Camille Chautemps which followed the Stavisky Bayonne pawnsshop scandal.

The conservative Le Temps warned against using the scandal as an instrument to hit freedom of the press, insisting the affair might have been hushed if newspapers had not exposed it.

Widow Doubts Suicide.

Mrs. Serge Stavisky, widow of the operator who died after allegedly fleecing the public of some $60,000,000 through fake pawnshop bonds, said today she is "doubtful" that her husband committed suicide.

At first she said she was satisfied he had killed himself when police closed in on him in a resort last week, but now she asserts letters he left undated indicating suicide might have been written weeks ago. There were indications, she added, that he was shot more than once.

Rumors have circulated for some time that police killed Stavisky to prevent him from implicating high officials in the scandal.

Chautemps Meets Ministers.

Premier Chautemps, who won a vote of confidence after his cabinet was gravely threatened by the scandal, held long conferences with his ministers today in an effort to push an investigation of the affair.

Eugene Raynaldy, minister of justice, announced appointment of a committee of three high judges to investigate the case with reference to administrative faults that allowed him to operate unmolested.

Thirty thousand feet of floor space in the Hotel Sherman exhibition hall and the mezzanine floor have been marked off for exhibits. Sessions of the annual board of directors meeting of Rotary International will be held during the week at headquarters at 211 West Wacker drive.

CLEANERS OPEN SESSIONS TODAY; STUDY NRA CODE

The National Association of Cleaners and Dyers will open its twenty-seventh annual convention today at the Palmer House, with almost its entire four day program scheduled for discussion looking to settlement of problems arising from the NRA code regulating the industry.

Arthur D. Whiteside, NRA divisional administrator, will address the group tomorrow afternoon. Also on the program tomorrow is N. J. Harkness, national code authority chairman and managing director of the cleaners. He will give a second speech Wednesday.

The cleaners claim a record for trade association growth, membership increasing from 696 on June 15, 1933, to 5,006 at the present time. J. Roy Ridley of Detroit is president and S. M. Rubenstein of Washington, D. C., is secretary treasurer of the organization.

CANADA VISIONS BETTER TIMES IN U. S. TRADE DEAL

Reciprocity Negotiations Called For.

Here is the sixth of a series of dispatches on United States-Canadian trade possibilities. Mr. Kinsley is making a trip through Canada as part of The Tribune's campaign to give its readers information which may help America regain old export markets or develop new ones for its agricultural and industrial products.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 14.—There has been no social revolution in Canada as the result of the depression. It has been hard pressed, but it goes the old way.

Movements away from government relief, toward greater private initiative, a severe curtailing of governmental expenditures, and a desire for closer commercial cooperation with the United States, may be discerned. Canadians are still wary of possible political implications in waterway or reciprocity treaties and both business and politics are deeply concerned with the experiments south of the border.

Quebec Fights Way Out.

If Quebec, which bulks on the Atlantic coast as big as Europe, were able to go her own way, there would be no long, sad tale of dole and depression. The independent spirit of rural Quebec has already almost surmounted these difficulties, and provincial leaders have found dominion demands and restrictions rather fatiguing.

The cost of relief has been dropping in the small towns and rural districts, although the burden on municipalities has become so great that it is now proposed to make this a provincial-federal task, with the issuance of long term bonds.

Nova Scotia and New Brunswick feel that they have been cut off from their natural development by government policy and are rather helpless about it. King's county council passed a resolution last week demanding from the Canadian government the right of Nova Scotia to make her own trade treaties.

Seeks Trade Tie with U. S.

Le Soleil [Quebec] voices the feeling of the French press on reciprocity as follows:

"The future of our foreign trade, by the very nature of things and quite apart from geographies, lies in the United States. Notwithstanding all the handicaps the tariff has created, trade exchanges between Canada and the United States from time immemorial have generally exceeded in volume and value the trade exchanges between the dominion and any other country even between Canada and the countries of the British empire.

"A thousand artifices may be invented, a thousand treaties à la Bennett [the prime minister] may be drafted, in an effort to combat that fact, but all in vain. The day is bound to come when there will be greater economic unity and more prosperity, too, in an exchange of products between Jack Canuck and Uncle Sam. The imperial agreements have nearly all been deceiving. Great Britain cannot do very much for us. We are at the mercy of a hundred factors which can effect British economy. By contrast there do not exist two countries that are more readily adaptable to unity and understanding from the point of view of trade and commerce than Canada and the United States."

Commerce Made for People.

Commerce is made for the people, not the people for commerce, in the opinion of this paper. The same idea in a different application is voiced in the statement of the national committee on sound public finance, which meets in Toronto on Jan. 22, under the auspices of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce. Taxpayers are being enlisted in board of trade committees right across the country.

"It is the belief of the chamber," says the committee's statement, "that business throughout the country must make itself more vocal on the question of unessential expenditures, which, if continued, will result in the impairment of our national credit, and on the taxation which is tending to disembowel business. Parliamentary members and municipal councils have to be made to realize, as was the British kingship in the 17th century, that the imposition of levies is not at the choice of the rulers, but at the option of the taxpayers themselves."

Urges Reciprocity Negotiations.

The Montreal Daily Herald says on reciprocity:

"The renaissance of reciprocity negotiations between Canada and the United States is one of the big possibilities of the present year. Trade between Canada and the United States has been as high as $1,350,000,000 in a year, which is $450,000,000 greater than Canada's present commerce with the whole world. During the last year the total trade between Canada and the United States has been around $380,000,000, one billion dollars less than the high record. Get the trade back to half of what it has been, on a fair basis of exchange, and what a blessing it will be for both countries."

While Canada imported from the United States about $300,000,000 worth of goods this year, she took about that much in machinery alone in 1929. If the United States could take from Canada lumber and fisheries, some dairy products, and about 200,000 head of live stock, a year, it might turn some of the trade that is now coming in from British possessions.

U. S. Cattle Exports Cut.

Her imports last year were highest in alcoholic beverages, coffee and chicory, sugar, tea, artificial silk, cotton yarn, raw wool, worsted and serges, furniture, auto parts, hardware and cutlery, iron pigs and ingots, copper, clay and products, and crude petroleum.

The Hawley-Smoot tariff cut Canadian cattle exports from 217,000 head in 1929 to 4,735 this year. In lumber it is the same story. In 1926 the United States took over 400,000,000 feet of British Columbia lumber. This has dropped to 27,000,000 feet for the first nine months of 1933.

Develops Trade Diplomats.

This is the Canadian side of the picture which must be improved. Some would like to have the British Marketing company, a private concern which follows empire policies with men and money, enter here with a $50,000,000 project as has been done in Australia. Canada has a special relation both to England and to the United States, and it is this delicate balance that is being swung back and forth, and which finds such expression as the Ottawa agreements and the present reciprocity sentiment.

Canada is developing students of markets, commercial diplomats, and studying quality of goods demanded, packing, tastes of customers in foreign lands and other necessary export technique, but her merchants still feel that her trade depends on the British navy and the British consular service to a large extent.

There has been a marked industrial advance, according to reports of manufacturers.

The depression has wrought a profound change in the industrial attitude toward better materials, better performance and lower ultimate costs, according to Robert C. Stanley, president of the International Nickel company.

"In those changes are the roots of an alloy age," he writes, "which is fast supplanting the age of steel, just as that improved material replaced iron in the long progress of evolution in metals. Men whose concern was an output to meet consumer demand have found in the depression the time and the necessity to devise new and better products. The striking way in which mechanical refrigeration for the home has gone against the tide of general business recession is a case in point."

In the meantime Quebec finds that the best remedy for the depression is return to the land.

LOS ANGELES FLOODS GIVE SEA LANES SOME SWANKY STREET NAMES

Avalon, Catalina Island, Cal., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—Roofs of bungalows, doors from houses, wooden street signs, tree trunks, and other débris from the Los Angeles New Year's day floods are beginning to bob up in the Catalina channel sea lanes.

Some of the wreckage is large enough to constitute danger to small craft, and the Catalina Island company has put out patrol boats to protect yachts and small fishing craft.

Two street signs, washed up on the island yesterday were from the foothill sections of Los Angeles, 25 miles from the ocean. They bore the names "Maurice avenue" and "Noonan boulevard."

Trans-Andean Rail Flood Damage Set at $2,000,000

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Officials of the trans-Andine railway today placed its damages from the Mendoza riverflood in Argentina Thursday at 5,000,000 pesos [about $2,000,000]. Reconstruction to enable resumption of service would take perhaps a year, they said, especially since funds now are not available. The flood swept through five bridges and obliterated long stretches of trackage. Thousands of Argentine tourists were stranded in Chile and must return by air or await repairs to highways and the railroad.

SUPREME COURT WILL HEAR PHONE RATE CASE TODAY

The United States Supreme court in Washington was scheduled to hear final arguments today in the ten year old litigation over Chicago telephone rates. The case involves a possible refund of $27,000,000 to four classes of Chicago telephone users and is expected to establish a rule for the future settlement of many controversies over public utility valuations for rate making purposes.

Both sides in the dispute are appealing to the high court from a decision given last October by three federal judges. On one side is the Illinois commerce commission and the city of Chicago and on the other side is the Illinois Bell Telephone company. The case grows out of the commerce commission's order, issued in 1933, reducing the minimum charge for 2 and 4 party residence coin box service; single and 2 party business coin box service and directing that all calls over the minimum be 4 cents instead of 5 cents.

The high court has been asked to order the reduced rates into effect and to direct the telephone company to refund the 1 cent extra charge made on all calls involved. The company claimed it could not make a fair rate of return on its investment if the reduction were enforced. The case hinges in the main on the value of the company's properties and its methods of dividing income with the American Telephone and Telegraph company.

HELD ON 2 DRIVING CHARGES.

Lawrence O'Connell, 616 West 46th place, a laborer, was being held by the Evanston police yesterday on charges of driving Saturday night while intoxicated and with using fictitious license plates.

Leo Merinbaum, a rice salesman, came here from St. Louis yesterday to take home his wife, Andrie, 29 years old, who ran away with a bus driver Saturday after leaving her husband a note declaring her intention of committing suicide. Mrs. Merinbaum was arrested in the Englewood Arms hotel, 824 West 62d street, in the company of Andrew Babon, 27 years old, of Harvey, driver of a Chicago-St. Louis bus. They were locked up at the detective bureau and will be arraigned in the Woman's court today. Merinbaum said he believed his wife's suicide note and he was glad to find her alive.

"The newspaper is an institution developed by civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

CONTEMPLATING THE SEAWAY SLUSH FUND.

As we contemplate the half million slush fund that was raised largely by illegal appropriations from state legislatures we wonder how much of the fund may have stuck to the legislators. We also wonder where the rest of it stuck. If its destination is not revealed we will not wonder—we will know.

CHECKS UPON DISHONESTY.

A committee of the board of the Chase National bank has been appointed to consider the advisability of suing some of the former officials of the bank for the recovery of money lost under their administration. Elihu Root Jr. has been retained to advise the committee. The evidence regarding the bank's management, obtained by the senate's banking committee, is being studied to see if the former officials of the bank can be held accountable for any of its losses.

The item is of unusual interest when read in connection with the news from many cities of the exercise of government influence in the selection of bank boards. Now that the RFC has bought an interest in many of the banks the government is venturing here and there to nominate some officers and directors and veto the nominations of others. It is not easy to foresee just how far this process will lead, but it is at least within the possibilities that eventually many of the largest banks in the country will be wholly under the domination of the government, staffed by officials selected by the government, and responsible only to the government.

If that were to happen and the money of the depositors and common stock holders should be lost through carelessness or dishonesty, what recourse would the victims have? They could not sue the United States government; no one has suggested that the citizen has any emergency powers to violate the constitution. It would be absurd to sue the officials of the bank, who only did what Washington told them to do. The encouragement to bad management might be considerable.

Rugged individualism is supposed these days to be the philosophy of pirates. It seems not to have occurred to many critics that any kind of individualism implies not only a considerable freedom of action on the part of the individual but also a high degree of legal and moral responsibility for actions taken, and the ruggeder the individualism the greater the responsibility. Thus many of the scoundrels, real and alleged, of the New Era have been separated from their positions of authority in industry and finance and many of them are broke and in disgrace. The steps taken by the Chase bank toward recovery of losses suggest that the accounts have not yet been closed.

But who is to bear moral and financial responsibility for the colossal waste of money in the Tennessee valley? Against whom can suit be brought for recovery of the hundreds of millions to be squandered on the Rio Verde and other greed-inspired reclamation schemes? Who can be sued for an accounting of the millions spent to destroy wheat, cotton, and hogs? In short, what does the new economics offer as a check upon avarice, greed, and ambition? The fact that the money wasted under the new economics is not willingly contributed by investors but is exacted, on threat of the penitentiary, from taxpayers indicates how much more important it is to provide such a check under the new economics than under the old.

It is no answer to say that the necessary restraint can be found in the power of the voters to remove an offending official. An analysis of government wastes in the past will reveal that they were instituted precisely for the purpose of retaining political control. That is why the real estate experts in Chicago were paid their millions and why the congressional pork barrel was a thriving institution. In the long run, perhaps, the voters will throw out a wasteful government, but the greater the probability that they will do so the greater the waste that is likely to be undertaken to avert defeat at the polls. If political action is a check upon a wasteful and dishonest government it is at best an inadequate one.

THE FAIR IN '34.

A new attraction in the Fair when it reopens will be a Spanish village. It will occupy two and a half acres and will be a substitute for the Spanish pavilion. The interest shown in the Belgian village is a guaranty for another transplantation of a bit of charming European scene and the Spanish village will contain reproductions of houses of the sixteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries, exhibiting the architecture of six provinces. A half million will be invested in the new attraction.

The Spanish background of America is not neglected in the areas where Spanish influence was most direct and most intimate, but it fades even in the northwest territory where it did penetrate. A colorful enlargement of Spanish derivations will be valuable to people who find that a sense of origins can be brought into their own lives in a romantic and stimulating fashion. Furthermore, much popular amusement in music and dancing comes from the Spanish soil and tradition and it is a good idea to give it a home in the Fair.

There will be other national villages in the reopened Fair, dedicated to the same purpose as the Spanish. They will include English, German, Swiss, and French, with also an early American colonial settlement. It is proposed not merely to keep the Fair and reopen the gates but to make it an even better Fair, with all the best of the old retained, an exhibition to which the people who came last year will want to return this year.

It's been remarked, and can be again, that the greatest single achievement setting a whole community off to a running start in recovery was that of private citizens in Chicago relying upon faith in themselves and their industry and ingenuity.

INCOME TAX NO CURE FOR PROPERTY LEVY.

Mr. H. B. Reyer, chief auditor of the Wisconsin tax commission, is quoted as saying in a recent address before the National Association of Cost Accountants in Milwaukee that income taxes have led to a reduced property tax rate, especially in cities and towns.

This is the argument that always has been made by advocates of income taxes, inheritance taxes and all of the numerous special levies that have been proposed and adopted since the turn of the century.

One searches in vain for any actual reduction that followed the enactment of any of them.

Wisconsin tax reports since the adoption of the income tax in 1911 show no trace of the reduction promised by the politicians and which Mr. Reyer says have resulted from it.

In the year 1912, before the Wisconsin income tax law was operative, the property tax for all of Wisconsin was $32,610,975. The next year, the first of its operation, the income tax produced $4,631,420 and the property tax, instead of showing a decline, actually increased a little more than a million dollars.

By 1920 the state collected $6,310,230 in income tax and the general property tax had grown by more than 100 per cent to $77,128,835.

There was $18,761,273 income tax collected in 1930, the state's high year, and by that time the property tax levy was $122,253,862.

The property tax record of the city of Milwaukee is interesting in view of Mr. Reyer's claim that the cities more than the country benefited from the income tax. In 1912 Milwaukee had a property tax rate of $11.46. In 1915 it was $12.72, in 1920, $22.78, and by 1930 it had grown to $26.01 for city purposes only.

The record is substantially the record of all taxes that have been proposed and adopted as relief for a general property tax. Inevitably they have proved not a substitute for the property tax but a burden added to it.

THE McGUFFEYS

A memorial to William and Alexander McGuffey has been established in Oxford, O., the home of Miami university, and Henry Ford is restoring the log house on a farm near Washington, Pa., which was once the McGuffey homestead. The great contribution of the two brothers to their own times was their series of elementary school readers, four by the elder William and two by his younger brother.

The McGuffeys undertook to teach the virtues while the child was being taught to read, and for the children of their day they succeeded in doing so without making the same virtues obnoxious to the young. It was their achievement, and a highly important one, to convert such qualities as honesty, politeness, industry, thrift, temperance and courage into the attributes of the natural world. The average child, learning to read with a McGuffey text, was inspired to believe that the personal and social virtues he saw exemplified were not things he had to struggle to acquire against the natural world but were the standards naturally expected of him. These qualities were so impressive that the average child would consider a breach of them an offense singling him out for reproach because he had violated the universally accepted idea.

There were in those days what were called Sunday school books, which failed to do what the McGuffeys did because they missed this natural quality. They also offended the child's sense of reality by deliberately trying to make him over. The McGuffeys taught him that when he was good he was natural.

Many adults may be amused, even now, when they find some residue of the McGuffey instruction cropping out like an instinctive action in something they do. Probably the most familiar reminder of this influence is the saving of a bit of string. In the days of the McGuffeys thrift was a virtue which rewarded the possessor because when he needed a thing he had it. Along with many other things, economics have changed, but the McGuffeys played an important and hardly secondary part in educating the people who were building the American nation in a great deal more than reading.

TALKING IN BILLIONS.

[The Toronto Globe.]

The President of a nation may have considerable satisfaction in looking forward complacently to a national debt of $31,000,000,000. Mr. Roosevelt told congress it was his belief the government should seek to hold it within this amount, although by June 30, next, it will stand at $834,000,000 more. Last December it was recorded at $23,813,790,000, as against the peak so far, $26,596,701,000 in 1919. Only a nation with tremendous resources could talk the language of many billions without a quiver. President Roosevelt is not alarmed, although admitting that his budget is "brutally frank." He proposes to borrow $10,000,000,000 within the next six months, and promises to have spent by the end of the 1935 fiscal period more than $16,529,000,000. And he is to have the budget balanced by that time, notwithstanding a two year deficit of $9,000,000,000 as a result of the recovery program.

Probably it is just as well he talks in such huge terms. It will prevent lesser lights than a brain trust from pretending to know what it is all about, and possibly convince them that such big doings must bring results on a big scale.

But, after all, it cannot be overlooked that the United States is a country wherein the term million became somewhat insignificant long ago. And lest people in this country wish to shout approvingly of President Roosevelt's courage in facing a debt of the proportions mentioned in order to bring "recovery," it may be pointed out that after this debt is achieved it will be little larger, if any, on a per capita basis, than the national debt of Canada at the present time.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

How to the Line, let the gnips fall where they may.

DOWN IN WASHINGTON congressmen say we've got to get ready for a war with Japan. That means I've got to commence practicing my salutes an hour a day. I might have been promoted and kept on being promoted until I got to be a general in the world's war only I spent most of my time on the boulevards in Paris explaining to officers that I knew I should salute 'em, that I knew how to salute, and that the reason I didn't salute was because I was looking in a shop window and didn't see 'em. If we get into a war with Japan I am going to start saluting when the first gun is fired and keep it up to the capture of Tokio. Then they won't throw me into the hoosegow for failure to salute an officer. I'll get in the hoosegow all right, but it will be because my hat wasn't on straight.

FOR A LITTLE GIRL'S COLLECTION.

Diana, see this lovely stone,
Flecked with gray and green and gold,
Traced with markings old—so old
That seasons held this land alone,
And kept their records all in stone.

Diana, see this lovely weed,
Thrust up through the matted sod,
Done with flowering, forming pod,
Protecting every tiny seed

Diana, oh, Diana Lou!
See beneath the lilac hedge,
A figured feather, tip and edge,
Designed with zigzag lines on blue,
And dropped, no doubt, for only you.

THE GELS employed as stenographers by the city of Bogota, which, as we all know, is in Colombia, S. A., have been ordered by the mayor of said city to refrain from "powdering their noses, smoking, or drinking black coffee during working hours." Bet a cookie that what makes the mayor mad is not because the gels powder their little noses but that they make such horrible grimaces during the powdering process. I saw a gel in a north side restaurant the other day who, between the soup and the roast beef sandwich, was powdering her nose, and I never realized before that the human countenance could be so drawn out of all resemblance to anything human, vegetable or mineral. A small boy was looking at her with frightened awe, and I'm certain that he was so scared it will stunt his growth and make his hair turn white.

RETROSPECTIVELY.

Today there came into my hands the old calf-bound volume of The Spectator, issued in 1857, with my father's fading name on the flyleaf, and I spent an evening renewing my boyhood acquaintance with those rare old masters of mellifluent English, Joseph Addison and Richard Steele. I find that I do not care much for their leisurely dissertations any more. Even good Sir Roger de Coverly has lost his charm and is inclined to dullness and garrulity. Life and letters are so different now. But as for literary style and distinction—prose gracefully adapted to its theme; lofty but not labored; balanced in phrasing and rhythmical in its lines; facile and free; softly assonant, adequate—still one finds it marching majestically through this musty old tome, as scarcely anywhere else in our language.

Conventional, somewhat too ornate and starchy, perhaps, these ancient sketches in The Spectator; but more attractive and readable, by far, than the modern nudity in literature. And I am glad I made their acquaintance, and that of The Vicar of Wakefield, Pickwick and Vanity Fair, in the days when life was lush and eager, but leisurely and acquisitive and contemplative, and my mental digestion equal to the most substantial fare.

PAGET'S BONE DISEASE.

A CORRESPONDENT wants an article on Paget's disease, but without specifying which of the several disorders bearing the name of that distinguished physician is the basis of his interest. We select Paget's disease of the bones. This is a chronic and incurable disease of certain areas in the bones, causing bony deformities. It is a disease of adult life, generally affecting those who are beyond the meridian. It may lead to spontaneous fracture or easy breaking of the bones, but that is not the rule. If a person who hitherto had straight legs notices that he is getting bowlegged he may suspect Paget's.

The man or woman we are considering here is well beyond the rickets period and is not entitled to bowlegs for any other reason; or the gradually developing bony deformity may be in regions other than the legs.

The other symptoms are pain in the affected region, perhaps some swelling or other soreness. Progressive weakness is another symptom. By this time suspicion is directed to the bones. X-ray pictures are taken. These show disease of the bones with bending and bowing.

Other forms of bone disease are suspected. Infection with tubercle bacilli or pus cocci, cold abscess, and white swelling are ruled out by the absence of fever and of pus and the X-ray pictures.

Repeated examinations of the blood and urine for their contents and proportions of lime and phosphorus may settle that this is a case of Paget's rather than one of some other forms of bone disease. The blood should contain a certain pretty definite and fixed amount of lime, and likewise of phosphorus. These minerals are taken into the body as part of our food. They are excreted by the kidneys, in the main.

In health, enough is absorbed by the blood to just equal the amount that is used up daily in the work of the body and then thrown away as waste by the kidneys. There are small glands, called parathyroids, that preside over the blood calcium, keeping it at the proper level, speeding up or slowing down waste by the kidneys and speeding up or slowing down absorption by the blood.

In Paget's disease repeated examinations of the blood show that it contains about the right amount of calcium and of phosphorus. Repeated examinations of the urine show that calcium is being thrown off at about the normal rate. This is not the case in those diseases of the bones that are most liable to be confused with Paget's. In these diseases the blood is low in calcium and relatively high in phosphorus. The urine contains an excessive amount of calcium. The kidneys are robbing the blood of lime. When some of these cases have been thoroughly examined it has been found that behind the bone disorder there lay a disease of the parathyroids. Not so in Paget's disease.

RINGWORM.

F. W. writes: Please mention several treatments for ringworm. Should the treatment for humans differ from that for pets and other live stock?

REPLY.

The treatment of ringworm varies according to circumstances. If the infected area is hairy cure is not easy unless the hair is first removed. This is done by X-ray treatments. After the hair is out of the way cure follows, often with no additional treatment. If the infection is in the beard, removal of hair may be necessary for cure. If it is on a nonhairy area, painting with iodine for a few days, followed by a few days of sulphur ointment, often cures. Treatment by a physician is often necessary.

Lower animals, and especially pets, are subject to a few skin diseases which can be communicated to man. Some varieties of ringworm are in the list.

The difficulty in curing these eruptions is due in part to hair, scabs, and thickened skin. Removal of hair by X-ray treatment will greatly promote cure.

PROBABLY JUST A SNORER.

J. N. writes: I have kept house for my brother for several months. Every night he has spells in which he flops about, has very labored breathing, and awakens with a jerk. Several years ago we lived in the same home. He did not then have noisy vibration of the nose as though some force were holding the air passages.

REPLY.

My guess, sister, is that your brother is now a two-fisted snoring man and that several years ago he was an amateur snorer or less. It is possible he has attacks of night epilepsy, but the first guess is the better.

HODGKIN'S DISEASE.

A. M. writes: Is Hodgkin's disease curable?

REPLY.

The ultimate outlook for a case of Hodgkin's is not good. In every suspected case there is the hope that the diagnosis is wrong and that the disease is one that can be successfully treated by radiotherapy or otherwise.

PAYING IN ADVANCE.

Chicago, Jan. 11.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. The owner of the building where I live has offered me a liberal allowance on my rent if I will pay a year in advance. If for any reason this party should lose the building, or should die, [2] would his rent receipt to me hold good, or would I have to pay it again to whoever might take over the building? So far as I know everything is all right at the present time. J. L.

1. In nearly every case where such an offer is made an investigation would reveal that there is danger that the offerer will lose the building and hence be in the position of not being able to deliver what he has sold.

2. If he should die your rights would be good against his estate; but if his rights should be terminated by foreclosure then you would lose.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO.—The year 1933 has been unusually kind to Japan. The consensus of opinion among leaders in various walks of life here is that Japan was possibly the only country in the world to have enjoyed even a semblance of prosperity during the last twelve months. The condition which prevailed in the cities during the last six months might almost be described as a boom.

The outstanding feature of the foreign trade of the nation during 1933 is unmistakably that an amazing expansion was made into new markets which hitherto had been neglected. These fields included South America, South Africa, the Malay states and the South seas. In many of these new territories Japan cut into American trade, but mostly into British exports.

Conditions in general throughout the country also showed a distinct improvement during the year. The political situation was never more stable and, despite their enormous unpaid debts and the present severe slump in silk prices as a result of the depression in the United States and the drop in the exchange rate of the dollar, the farmers are comparatively well off.

Labor wages and the scale of salaries have gone up. The bankers and financiers are inclined to be optimistic. Many industries are actually being worked day and night. Munitions makers are making money hand over fist, or should be from the way their industry is humming with activity.

In 1931 and 1932 the most important trend in Nippon's foreign trade was the shifting of cotton exports from China to India as a result of the Chinese boycott of Japanese products in the wake of the Shanghai and Manchurian engagements. Now India is closing its markets to Japan. This, undoubtedly, was by far the most serious aspect of Japan's trade situation in 1933.

But Japan is fully prepared to accept the Indian challenge. It has, during the last few months, wedged into British markets in non-British territory in retaliation, places where the British could not force a boycott or other discriminatory action against Japan. It is also developing markets in hitherto unexploited areas, such as Oceania.

During the first six months of the year Japanese exports to North America and Europe registered a gain of almost 80 per cent in comparison with the corresponding period of 1932. Even greater strides were made, however, in Japan's trade with other continents. In the case of Asia, a gain of 60 per cent was recorded.

This, however, was in turn eclipsed by the gain of 76 per cent to Oceania, and of 90 per cent to Africa. The most amazing advance, however, was made in Central and South America, where the increase was over 200 per cent.

The boycott of Japanese goods by China was somewhat offset by purchases by Manchukuo and the Kwantung leased territory. These two regions purchased $30,000,000 more from Japan during the first six months of the year than they did last year. The total for the last half of the year is expected to be considerably larger than this, what with new industries sprouting like mushrooms in Manchukuo.

WOMEN IN INDUSTRY.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—Mr. Harry C. Lind's letter in this morning's issue of THE TRIBUNE on women in industry is extremely pertinent.

In the small social circle in which I move I rarely run across an unemployed woman. But I and a considerable portion of my male friends have been out of work for months.

One of the most unbearable features of this movement is the multiplication of incomes in one household. On one side of the street we have four wage earners in one family, three of them women; on the other side, three educated, trained men, all unemployed, in another family. This is an actual case within my knowledge. Another one is a young lady holding down two jobs for a north side department store; a full time day job, and several evenings a week doing bookkeeping for the same concern.

If some member of congress were to propose that the immigration bars on Chinese or Japs were to be let down and a horde of cheap labor invited into the country, he would probably be mobbed. But that is exactly what has happened in this country during the past two decades; a horde of women have descended upon industry, with the present consequences. No wonder our sadly overburdened, clogged, economic order has just about broken down. Swarms of young girls from every small town in the country, attracted by the glamour of cities like Chicago, have invaded the urban centers, demanded jobs, and usually secured them. Employers have fostered the move. Why pay a man $5 a day when a girl could be secured for $2?

Chicago, Jan. 12.—I am writing this to express to you my very great appreciation for the amount of trouble that your Mr. Garfield McEdwards of the city desk took yesterday to keep us posted on the flight progress of my brother-in-law, Lieutenant Commander McGinnis.

Mr. McEdwards was most courteous and took a great deal of trouble to give us bulletins as fast as he knew anything about it, and this is especially appreciated from such a busy person, and I should like you to know that one of your employes has taken trouble out of the ordinary to this extent for some one absolutely unknown to him.

QUESTION FOR MINNESOTANS.

Wilmette, Ill., Jan. 11.—In regard to the editorial in today's TRIBUNE, "Thus Far and No Farther," may I ask the residents of Minnesota a question?

Would it not have been more advisable for their legislature to have enacted a law obligating the community of Minnesota to assume all of the costs and losses of a moratorium intended to protect the "general security of society" than to have destroyed the contract relationship between the creditor and the debtor?

The people of Minnesota would then have avoided the disappearance of future investments in their state and made the two edged decision by the Supreme court unnecessary.

EX-JUDGE.

PACKERS' PROFITS.

Chicago, Jan. 10.—Our attention has been directed to a letter from Mr. Ray J. Nugent which appeared in the Voice of the People of THE TRIBUNE of Dec. 27, 1933.

Mr. Nugent states that "packers have always had the advantage, and they play it to the limit."

We believe a study of packers' profits indicates clearly that this statement is not accurate. If packers were able to "have the advantage," we believe it is obvious that the results would be seen in their operating results. The several hundred packing companies that submit financial reports to the United States department of agriculture, and whose operations represent more than 85 per cent of the volume of all companies which slaughter live stock, perform the entire function of dressing the live stock and processing and distributing the products therefrom at an average profit of a fraction of a cent per pound.

As a matter of fact, the profits during the last year were so small that, if they had been omitted, the price to the consumer would not have been appreciably lower or the price to the live stock producer appreciably higher.

Mr. Nugent speaks about the value of by-products of the packing industry. The development of by-products has made it possible for the spread between the wholesale price of meat and the price paid to the producer for live stock to be lessened. In many cases during the last few years, however, the value of certain by-products has been so small that it has been unprofitable to process them.

WESLEY HARDENBERGH,
Department of Public Relations, Institute of American Meat Packers.

$2 A DAY.

Chicago, Jan. 8.—I believe that the government should give work to all that need it, not only in years of depression but at any time; but that pay should not exceed $2 a day for 8 hours' work—or at the rate of 25 cents per hour. That should provide an existence, and that is all that any one should expect the government to provide. The rate of pay offered by the government today is entirely out of line, and at that the men are not satisfied.

I am not a taxpayer in the sense of owning property, and am only working for a small wage at a job that I have held for seven years, but I realize very well that for our government to continue as it is now doing is suicidal.

To be continually helping the farmer is all bunk. The farmer that operates carefully on the basis of his own capital is not bad off, at least not any more than the small business man. The fellow that steps out and uses a lot of borrowed money is the one that is in trouble and the same is true about the business man. Now if the government is to be complete in its work and takes care of the business bankrupts as well as the farmers and the unemployed, we soon would have a problem that would make the budget makers dizzy. Let's hope that some one soon gets a sensible slant on this welfare work.

POPE PROCLAIMS HUMBLE PEASANT HEALER A SAINT

Sanctifies Founder of Sisters of Charity.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VATICAN CITY, Jan. 14.—Pope Pius XI. in St. Peter's cathedral today proclaimed as a saint Sister Joan Antida Thouret, founder of the order of Sisters of Charity, and her name was written in heaven with the most solemn rites of the church.

(St. Joan was also widely known under the Italian version of her name Giovanna.)

Twenty cardinals and fifty bishops watched the canonization ceremonies of the humble French peasant girl who fled to Naples before the fury of the French revolution and later founded an organization now known in all hospitals in the Christian world and which numbers now about 8,000 sisters.

Hundreds of Sisters of Charity in their white bonnets were present in St. Peter's today when the founder of their order was proclaimed a saint and all the bells of St. Peter's rang out the announcement to the Christian world over the Vatican radio station.

Thousands of Candles Lighted.

Tonight the facade of St. Peter's, in accordance with tradition, is lighted with thousands of candles in celebration of the new name added to the calendar of saints.

Sister Thouret, now St. Joan Thouret, was born of a peasant family in 1765 in France and died in Naples in 1826. Hundreds of members of her order serve in Catholic hospitals in the United States.

She was beatified seven years ago. Many miraculous cures have been attributed to her intercession, and five of these constituted the motive of her sanctification today. These miracles consist mostly of extraordinary cures experienced by nuns suffering from incurable diseases. Two Sisters of Charity, Sister Pastena and Sister Alfieri, who had miraculous cures after attending the beatification ceremonies seven years ago, were present at today's rites.

Enormous Throng Present.

Their cures constituted the two miracles upon which was postulated Sister Thouret's sanctity.

Today's ceremonies of sanctification were attended by an enormous concourse of the faithful and the halls of St. Peter's, Christianity's major temple, were overflowing.

At 8:15 o'clock this morning began the traditional procession in the church of all religious orders, together with the postulants of the new saint, carrying her new banner, inscribed with Sister Joan's picture and other images. Then came the papal cortege, with Pope Pius, in a portable throne, wearing pluvial and miter and carrying a lighted candle in his left hand.

Triple Request Made.

When the pontiff was seated on the throne a triple postulation in behalf of St. Joan Thouret was made by the consistorial advocate, Count Sacconi, and, in the name of the pontiff, Msgr. Bacci responded.

At the termination of the third postulation Pope Pius pronounced the classic formula of canonization and inscribed St. Joan Thouret in the book of saints. He set Aug. 24, the day of her death, as the date on which her festival is to be observed in all Catholic churches.

The "Te Deum" followed and all the bells of St. Peter's pealed out the proclamation of the new saint. A papal mass preceded the concluding and most picturesque ceremony of the canonization, that of the oblations. For to the new saint was finally offered, in accordance with proper tradition—carried out through the ages—wine and bread, candles, bird cages, small birds, and doves.

A blast of silver trumpets ringing through Michelangelo's famous cupola announced the end of the sanctification ceremonies. They required five hours.

IRISH BLUESHIRT INVITES ARREST ON PEACE BOND

Police Present as Cronin and O'Duffy Appear.

LISMORE, Irish Free State, Jan. 14.—(AP)—In gallant and dramatic defiance of the De Valera government Commandant E. J. Cronin, co-leader of the outlawed blue shirts, appeared on a platform here today and challenged authorities to rearrest him.

Cronin has reportedly been "on the run," as the Irish say, since his period of grace expired last Friday and the government announced he was liable to arrest for noncompliance with a court order to file bond to keep the peace for two years.

Guards Look On.

Civic guards, however, who calmly watched today's performance, allowed Cronin to finish his speech and leave the platform unmolested.

The crowd was taken by surprise when Cronin, together with Gen. Owen O'Duffy, leader of the United Ireland party, stepped to the platform, both wearing blue shirts. In the crowd were hundreds of men and women also wearing blue shirts, mostly covered with coats because of a drizzling rain.

Defies Authorities.

"I am here to give the lie to rumors that I am a fugitive from justice," declared Cronin in his speech. "If the authorities want me I am here for the taking."

Cronin paused and the crowd waited expectantly, but the civic guards did not move. Gen O'Duffy later took the platform and predicted a general election in Ireland before March.

FAMILY HAS 3 OPERATIONS IN ONE WEEK

Bloomington, Ill., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The Harvey Halloway family of Lexington, Ill., today claims the championship for hard luck. "Three operations in one family in one week is enough," according to Halloway.

Last Sunday the two year old daughter, Phyllis Joyce, suffered a ruptured appendix and underwent an operation in a Bloomington hospital.

Tuesday another child, Lyle, 10 years old, followed his sister to the operating table for a similar operation.

On Saturday the 10 year old brother of Halloway's wife, Melvin Rouse, was rushed to the same hospital to have his appendix removed.

Quit worrying—Act

That abnormal "falling" is nature's way of throwing off diseased and "dead" hairs. These should be examined, and the entire condition diagnosed and promptly remedied, before it runs its course to complete baldness.

To do this with modern, scientific knowledge and methods is our business and has been for many years.

We eliminate dandruff, itching, over oily secretions, harmful germ organisms and put the scalp in a condition of resistant, glowing health.

Thin spots soon begin to show the result of scientific treatment. A new, healthy growth adds itself to the hair you have. This improvement becomes permanent.

In place of experimenting with all kinds of "tonics" and lotions upon the only head of hair you have, it will be better to come to the WELLINGTON Hair & Scalp INSTITUTE, where every worker is registered and works under the authority of the state.

MR. WELLINGTON, founder and head of this Institute and, through long years of study and experience an accepted authority on hair and scalp disorders, will give you his personal attention.

T-1-15 Upon request, a one-half hour trial treatment may be had at small cost ($1.00). Save this and kindly bring it when you call. No charge for examination.

This we believe will satisfy and convince you of the every day fairness of our organization and thoroughness of our work. Further treatments may be had at $2.50. The trial treatment includes our 100% Olive Oil Castile Shampoo or Egg Shampoo. We take complete care of your hair without any other expense.

It is your privilege to investigate and learn for yourself. You may call any Monday, Wednesday or Friday between 10 and 9. Other days between 10 and 6.

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

When the full sized Broadway musical shows begin to arrive the Chicago theatrical season takes on a normal aspect, and there is good cheer at the corner of Clark and Randolph streets. One of them—and the first one in six months—settled down for a visit at the Grand Opera house last night, to the complete satisfaction of a full conclave of the regular première customers. It is "Hold Your Horses," a large frolic with and about the well known Joe Cook, sometimes called "the one man circus."

Among the thousands of words comically and glibly spoken by Mr. Cook during this entertainment is the remark: "It happened way back in mediæval times, about five or six years ago." That sentence might be taken as the theme of "Hold Your Horses," whose story happened 'way back in ancient American history, about thirty years ago, when the customs of the natives, especially New Yorkers, were so quaint that modernists are expected to curl up with laughter whenever they [the aforesaid customs] are depicted on the stage.

In other word, this extravaganza deals with the time called "the turn of the century," and is peopled with such fantastic and mythological characters as Lillian Russell, John L. Sullivan, Gambler Canfield, Diamond Jim Brady, Oscar Hammerstein I., and Nigger Mike. And some of the old folksongs of that bizarre era, such as "Tell Me, Pretty Maiden," from "Florodora," are sung during the festive proceedings.

Mr. Cook is the life of the party in the character of a Broadway "cabby" who dresses like a minstrel show performer and is elected mayor by accident. He skitters through the scenes that are associated with the New York metropolitan legend—Rector's, the Casino, Canfield's gambling house, the old Waldorf-Astoria, the Bowery, Coney Island, etc.—chattering with calm lunacy and playing tricks with his numerous gadgets. His inventions are new and of bewildering variety, and they work so fast that one never has a chance to stop laughing.

If I tried to describe Mr. Cook's horse and cab—his greatest gadget but only a single piece of his complex equipment—this account would read like the inventory of a magicians' supply house. This impressive layout is riddled with contraptions, do-flickers, and jiggers that operate for comic effect when the master mind that invented them presses the butons. It is Mr. Cook's tour de force of mad mechanism, and its like was never seen upon the stage before.

Mr. Cook is also accompanied by his favorite djinn or "stooge," Dave Chasen, who has a face fit for haunting houses and a smile that almost guarantees him a fellowship in an asylum for the feeble minded, if he ever escapes from the control of his boss. Says Mr. Cook to Mr. Chasen, casually:

Whereupon Mr. Chasen obligingly drops into the cellar, apparently, through a suddenly opened trap door. "Hold Your Horses" is full of such minor surprises.

There are pauses in the comic business, in both acts, to permit Harriet Hoctor, birdlike ballet dancer, to weave through graceful measures as leader of a group of coryphees. These are charming illustrations of the art of the dance, strikingly staged.

There is merry singing and dancing by June O'Dea, heroine of the show's little love story; Dorothy Dare, a bright young soubrette, and the lissome Frances Upton. There is character acting and comic acting and wisecracking by any number of males, among them the energetic Tom Patricola, who appears as the champion Bowery hoofer at Nigger Mike's. There are some fifteen musical numbers, all of them up to standard, some of them unusually effective.

Since "Hold Your Horses" purports to hold the mirror up to the New York of 1900 and no doubt demanded research work on the part of its authors, costume designers and management, I wish to rise with a correction. The title, "Florodora," is misspelled four times in lettering on scenery representing the backstage of the Casino when that musical comedy was in performance. . . . The title is not and never was "Floradora."

Field Museum Puts "Desert Varnished" Pebbles on Display

Pebbles and rocks covered with "desert varnish," a phenomenon occurring in very dry regions, are on exhibition in Clarence Buckingham hall of the department of geology at Field Museum of Natural History. They were collected in semi-arid regions of Brazil and in the Atacama desert of Chile by museum expeditions. The "varnish" is a thin, lustrous, brown coating which looks like a brown lacquer rubbed to a dull finish. It is formed by mineral residues left by the evaporation of ground waters which underlie even the driest deserts. The coating is a mixture of the oxides of iron and manganese and is polished by sands blown over the rocks by desert winds.

PROBABLY every one invited to the Arts club by Mrs. Laird Bell for this afternoon to meet Nina Thielade [pronounced Tealahdy] and Mme. Stueckgold will be there, if only to get a look at Thielade, the 18 year old dancer who is half Javanese, half Danish. She is said to be both slant and blue of eye, with dark brown hair and long, narrow hands. It was of Thielade that Pavlowa said, "People talk of me now—later they will talk of her."

Vale.

Probably the most exciting tale we have heard about the young dancer is that her great-grandmother, who was a daughter of the sultan of Djokjokarta on the island of Java, was put to death for eloping with a Polish officer. Thielade's own father is a Danish journalist and he was ejected from Germany because Hitler objected to his writings. She speaks five languages, including excellent English and not including the Javanese she learned as a baby, most of which she has forgotten.

He was working in one of the apartments—an apartment shared by Clarkson Norris and Tom Dunn, and Mr. Dunn, thinking to make a little conversation, commented that he must have been pretty busy last summer during the Fair.

"Yes," the man replied, "but not as busy as we were during the other Fair." [It turned out that he had been with the Plaza hotel for 42 years.]

FOUR of the closest friends of the late Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick met in the gray stone mansion on the drive the other evening at 5 o'clock, just as the auctioneer's attendants locked the door behind the last thrill seeker. It was a sad and difficult moment. They realized that this was the last time they would ever enter the house in which they had been almost daily visitors; that a chapter in their lives was over and the page turned. . . . And they selected a few things from her personal possessions that an agent will buy for them when the auction opens Jan. 16 to be cherished as mementoes of a lifetime friendship.

"Not far, only about three blocks," replied the applicant.

A WELL known Chicago woman was moving from one apartment to another in the same building and, remembering the neat little Salvation Army "Two R" shop [rummage and resale] on North State street, decided to send over all the small pieces of furniture she didn't actually need. She dispatched a small truck with the pieces—a chair or two, a telephone stand, a bookcase, and several occasional tables, then went into the new apartment to arrange the furniture as it was carried in. Suddenly she realized that one of the tables she had sent to the resale shop was just what she needed for a certain bare place. Calling a taxi, she jumped into it, hoping to overtake the truck before it had reached the shop. However, she was too late. When she arrived at the shop the table already was in the window. All she could do was go in and buy it back.

Lorado Taft Builds Model of Proposed Los Angeles Museum

Clarence B. Mitchell, son of the late John J. Mitchell, Chicago banker, will leave tonight for Pasadena, Cal., to confer with his cousin, William May Garland, president of the Los Angeles Art association, on plans for a museum of comparative sculpture in Los Angeles.

Mr. Mitchell will take with him photographs he took yesterday of a model of the proposed museum now nearing completion in Lorado Taft's studio, 6...6 Ingleside avenue. Mr. Taft will go to Los Angeles late this month to discuss plans. Although being sponsored by the art association, the museum project does not have definite financial backing as yet. It is hoped that this may be forthcoming during Mr. Taft's visit.

The proposed museum would resemble the Trocadero, in Paris, in its general plan. The cast would be arranged to portray the development of sculpture and serve as a library for that art. Photographic art also is to have a place in the museum, for which reason Mr. Mitchell is particularly interested in the project.

Edith Cummings Will Be Bride of New Yorker

She'll Wed Curtis Munson Sometime in Spring.

BY JUDITH CASS.

WHEN a young woman with the cosmopolitan interests of Miss Edith Cummings becomes engaged, it is news of the first magnitude. This morning Mrs. David Mark Cummings of 1550 North State parkway is announcing the betrothal of her attractive daughter to Curtis B. Munson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Munson of New York City.

The delightful news was first broken to members of the family on Friday evening when Mr. Munson arrived from New York to spend the week-end with Miss Cummings at the home of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Dexter Cummings, in Lake Forest. Since then congratulations and good wishes have literally been showered upon the young couple by relatives and intimate friends.

Widely Known in Society, Artist, Sportswoman.

Ever since she finished at Westover and was presented to society by her mother at a musical June 7, 1919, at their Lake Forest home, Miss Cummings has been one of the most popular young women in society with an acquaintance that extends through most of the European capitals. Added to her pleasing personality are her artistic talents and her recognized abilities as a sportswoman.

She is known best of all, of course, as one of the country's finest woman golfers, having won the United States championship in 1923 and the Western championship a year later. With almost equal ability she hunts and shoots. Three years ago with a party of friends she brought down big game in the Yukon. Two years ago she rented an ancient "schloss" in Hungary and spent three months in that country hunting and shooting.

Last year when she went to Jamaica with Miss Eleanor Holden, she pursued her artistic interests, painting and sketching. In 1927 she surprised her friends by sending them cards from New York announcing that she would spend the winter doing interior decorating.

She Summers Near His Mining Interests.

Miss Cummings' latest vacation was a trip to Jaspar National park [Canada] last summer and the reason for this is now revealed, since Mr. Munson is a mining engineer with interests in that adventurous country of the Canadian Rockies in and about Edmonton, Alta. After finishing at St. Paul's and graduating from Yale in 1916, he served as an officer in the world war with distinction. It was after this that he undertook his engineering career.

Miss Cummings and Mr. Munson met in the east several years ago. Of recent months they have continued their acquaintance with week-ends in New York or Chicago as Mr. Munson was on his way to or from Edmonton.

It was while Miss Cummings was visiting his parents at their home at 950 5th avenue, New York, last week [Mr. Munson is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Munson of New York and of the late Andrew McKee of Pittsburgh] that she and Mr. Munson decided to announce their engagement. And while the Dexter Cummingses were giving them their blessing last Friday night at their home Mrs. Cummings was relating the glad news to her good friend, Mrs. George D. McLaughlin, at the birthday party she was giving for her at her town apartment.

William Robson Notman to Wed Eastern Girl.

From the east this morning comes the news of the engagement of Miss Audrey Pamela Jones of Saratoga Springs, N. Y., to William Robson Notman of Bermuda. The announcement is made by Miss Jones' sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Loyal A. Norton Jr. of Saratoga Springs. Mr. Notman is a son of Mrs. William Robson Notman of Chicago and the late Dr. Notman.

When John Erskine, the author, critic, and president of the Juilliard Foundation for Music, arrives in Chicago late tomorrow, he will be met at the station by the William A. Nitzes' chauffeur, for he is to be their house guest during his three day stay in the city.

Prof. Erskine is coming especially to speak for the William Vaughan Moody foundation Wednesday evening in Mandel hall on the University of Chicago campus. His subject will be "What Is American Music?"

Although the Friday club hoped to have Prof. Erskine for its guest speaker, the distinguished gentleman finds it impossible to remain so long since he must be in New York Friday morning for a radio rehearsal. He will be entertained, however, at several intimate gatherings during his brief visit, for Mrs. Nitze has planned

Trousseau Corner Makes Bride-to-Be's Purchasing Simpler

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Romance in a corner!

The newest idea for worried brides-to-be—one enterprising shop has taken all the bridal loot, all the fluffy, all the satins, silks, tulles and laces and hung them in one room called the Bride's room. From now on you can hustle down town, sink in the capacious comfort of deep chairs and select your trousseau or just your wedding dress, without the distracting influence of any other kind of clothes. Every imaginable wedding dress that any bride may have ever dreamed about, can be either found at once or ordered from practically bales of smooth new silken samples.

Experts, who have planned wedding clothes and trousseaux for years, are eager to help, hint or guide as well as approve . . . nothing you can want in the way of different wedding parties or pageants, will stump them. They'll gladly, and most enthusiastically plan everything from something blue, to even the diplomatic relations concerning the necessary borrowed bit. From veils, halos, muffs, mitts, gloves, hats and shoes and bridal lingerie, everything will be supplied.

The experts will show you new spring things of tender greens, and daffodil yellow . . . gowns of tulle with airy ruffles, gowns of whispering romantic taffetas that swish most enchantingly as you march down the aisle . . . or if you wish they'll garb you like a story book princess in priceless lace or in long gleaming gowns of shimmering satin. The supply is inexhaustible and, what's more, they design each bride's gown that is ordered very different from any other costume selected by any former trousseau buyer.

Triangle Film Goes Goofy in Some Scenes

"IF I WERE FREE."
Produced by RKO.
Directed by Elliot Nugent.
Presented at the Palace theater.
THE CAST.

Sarah Casenove	Irene Dunne
Gordon Evers	Clive Brook
Tono Casenove	Nils Asther
Hector Stribling	Henry Stephenson
Jewel Stribling	Vivian Tobin
Dame Evers	Laura Hope Crews
Mrs. Gill	Tempe Pigott
Mrs. Evers	Lorraine MacLean

By Mae Tinée.

Good Morning!

Again Irene Dunne figures in the "back street" of a man's life. But don't get the idea that "If I Were Free" is as good a picture as "Back Street," because it's not.

The film, an adaptation of a John Van Druten play called, "Behold We Love," is of the familiar "triangle" construction.

The action starts in Paris where Gordon Evers is discovered going to the dogs via Martinis on account of he and his wife don't love each other and she won't set him free. He comes across a beauteous and despairing lady [Irene Dunne] whose foreign spouse is giving her a run around—one of many run arounds—and whose cruelty is on the point of driving the charming wife to suicide.

So Evers and Sarah Casenove meet and love.

"Come with me to England!" he begs.

She cries: "I WILL . . . !"

To England they go. She opens an antique shop and he, a barrister by profession, takes up his barristering again—life having once more become worth while . . .

But STILL, that stubborn Mrs. Evers refuses to step out of the picture. . . A mutual friend persuades Sarah that for the good of Gordon's cause she should give up her lover . . .

WELL—Evers had been in the war. AND annexed a bullet. And the doctor tells him he has just a few more months in mortal coil. . . Of course, says the M. D., an operation MIGHT save his life; but such an 'op' would be mighty risky . . .

"I'll take the risk!" cries Evers in a ringing voice. He's not afraid of the big, bad knife.

From here on the piece is positively goofy. Direction of the hospital scenes strikes you as having been positively half-witted. The ending is picturesque but blah.

"If I Were Free" is blessed with an able cast, and some of the scenery, charmingly photographed, is lovely. But, as a whole, this movie is a pretty poor excuse for adult entertainment.

Tribune to Sponsor Conference on Major Problems, Continuing in Session in Two Days.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

The first annual Conference on Major Problems, in which leading clubwomen of the five states of Michigan, Wisconsin, Indiana, Iowa, and Illinois will participate, has been definitely set for Thursday and Friday, Feb. 15 and 16. The conference will be held under the auspices of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, at the Palmer house. Major problems will be discussed by leaders in current thought and political action.

Arrangements are being made by member groups of the State Federation of Women's Clubs in this area to send delegates to Chicago for the two day event. No credentials will be required, however, as the program will be open to all organizations affiliated with the state federations, and clubwomen from the entire territory will be eligible to attend.

As an indication of the clinical thoroughness with which all subjects will be attacked, Supervising Captain John Stege, celebrated Chicago police ace, will talk on crime and its prosecution. Gov. Henry Horner, for years Probate judge of Cook county before he became chief executive of Illinois, will be a principal speaker. Col. Robert R. McCormick, publisher of THE TRIBUNE, will be the chief speaker on the closing day, and Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin of Washington, D. C., a director of the National League of Women Voters, will come from the capital to make an address.

Three sessions will be held, one on Thursday and two on Friday, permitting an interval for an exclusively social function on Thursday evening, when the presidents of the Federations of Women's Clubs of these five states will be special guests at a reception and entertainment in the grand ballroom of the hotel.

Mrs. William Franklin Farrell, president of the Illinois federation, will preside at the opening session and act as chief hostess to her fellow dignitaries from the adjoining states. Mrs. Farrell, who returned yesterday from the meeting of directors of the general federation at Washington, prophesied a tremendous success for this first Conference on Major Problems.

Mrs. Eugene Henely of Grinnell, Ia., head of the Iowa federation, also expressed enthusiasm at receipt of the invitation, and declared in her prompt reply that she welcomed the opportunity for meeting the officials and members of the other state federations.

Gov. Henry H ner, who immediately accepted the invitation to participate, is a scholar and humanitarian as well as chief executive of the state. He has few equals in his devotion to and knowledge of the life and works of Abraham Lincoln, and possesses a collection of Lincolniana which is constantly expanding in size and in importance.

Over a period of eighteen years he occupied the bench in the Probate court of Cook county, where his record for protecting the interests of widows and orphans was unsurpassed throughout the country. He has the reputation for preparing public addresses with more care than any official except President Roosevelt, and is recognized as a platform personality.

Especial interest will attend the appearance of Capt. Stege, the most colorful figure in Chicago police annals during the most sensational episodes in the city's history. His personality and experiences have furnished material for many writers. The late Edgar Wallace, British author of scores of detective thrillers, declared that a two day tour of Chicago under the guidance of Capt. Stege a couple of years ago, was one of the most memorable experiences of his life.

In addition to a vivid background among lawbreakers of many years in Chicago, Capt. Stege has acquired definite theories as to the right and the wrong way to deal with criminals, both potential and actual. He will incorporate these suggestions into a talk that will also cover an analysis of the characters of notorious gangsters and other police characters of the last decade.

Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin is a recognized expert in the economic problems of today. Before her marriage in 1922 she was prominent in the United States department of agriculture, and for three years traveled in every state in the Union, conducting special campaigns. For years she has attended all congressional hearings and floor debates of legislation relating to living costs and is qualified to discuss the power question, the tariff and unfair trade practices.

At the Conference on Major Problems program she will talk on the food and drug act and its influence on the pocketbook of the consumer.

The conference will close Friday afternoon. That evening a tour of Tribune Tower has been slated for the local and visiting clubwomen, when the operation of the plant of this newspaper will be seen under the direction of qualified guides.

THE WILD BIRD

FACING SPINSTERHOOD.

The open landau swept gracefully around the curving driveway and came to a stop before the entrance to Lynwood. The perfectly matched blacks, slender and sleek, stood with front legs extended, tossing their silver bits as though posed for the judging. The groom descended and stood with the lap rug over his arm. It was precisely 4 o'clock of the afternoon in middle May, 1926.

Lynwood rose in the stony solidity of its gray-stone walls to its mansard roof dominated by a square turret, reminder of that Victorian era when a mansion was never complete without its tower. The door opened and Barbara Brawne came out, followed by old Thomas with the baskets. Peter, round and rubicund, thirty years in the family, touched his whip and leaned forward for the orders.

"To Miss Mintie's, Peter."

She sprang lightly to her seat; the groom tucked in the lap robe and tendered the afternoon mail, which she sorted rapidly and transferred to Thomas, after retaining two letters. The landau rolled smoothly through long avenues of syringa and lilac to the iron gates, beside which a sign announced: NO AUTOMOBILES ALLOWED ON PREMISES.

"Letters from Helen and Daisy," she thought as she looked at the envelopes. "They might have known it was hopeless."

She had the small hands and feet, the delicate wrists and ankles of her mother's generation. The head was finely set on slightly sloping shoulders which suggested the drooping décolleté of a Victorian age. The forehead was clear and brilliant against the masses of black hair parted in the middle and turned into a heavy knot that hung low on her neck. The flight of the eyebrows was gracefully defined. The eyes were deep and limpid, the dark luster of the iris exaggerating their depth and size. The lower part of the face, in contrast to the breadth and brilliance of the upper, descended in a curiously foreshortened oval. The mouth was irregular, the lips drooping in repose or turning in a fluttering twisted smile. Nevertheless, the under lip was full and warm, as in shy, sensitive natures capable of intense feeling. Had the mouth been more regular, the chin rounder, it would have been a face of unusual beauty. Even so, it had that charm

"Tell the truth," the first letter said. "Tell your father it's time I met some eligible men."

"Well, now for a scolding," she said, frowning again as she opened the first letter.

My darling B——

I simply won't take no for an answer! I am determined to save you in spite of yourself! You say your father would never consent to your paying me a visit. He'd make a distressing scene. It's not worth fighting for, etc., etc. Rubbish! How old are you? You are 22! I revolted two years ago—and do you think that was easy? You simply must screw up your courage and liberate yourself. How? Take the plunge. Tell the truth. Say, "My dear father, I am going on a visit to Helen Langtry, because it is time I met some eligible men."

Barbara, I can see you shake your head and your funny, reluctant little smile! Very well, if you lack the courage—which you do—pack up and leave a letter.

Seriously, Barbara, unless you are resigned to join the Oxbridge Episcopalian sisterhood you must assert yourself. You darling, you have no vocation to be an old maid! Don't I know you. You've got a sort of outer look of reticence, as though you asked nothing and expected nothing, but that's not you! That's the way you've been brought up and suppressed. Do you know what you really are? All impulses and emotions. A wild bird in a cage."

The young girl opened a second letter of invitation:

Can't you see what's before you? When you've served twenty years in the ranks you may be promoted to the hierarchy of the admonishing angels and determine who is to be asked to join the Garden club. You'll be on the library committee and given a broom to sweep back the tide of modern fiction. You'll rule the Village Improvement society and lecture the rest of us on what to do with our lawns and trees! No, you'll never be that—but you will become one of the administering angels and run church fairs and vacation homes and invent new charities for a thrill!

She put away the letter with an uneasy laugh, for, underneath the sprightliness of her friend's description, the warning corresponded only too well with her own premonitions. A dozen times she had attempted to rebel, only to temporize and retreat before the rigidity of the rooted parental authority.

The carriage had come to a stop before the faded pink brick house nestled under the maples, where Miss Mintie was awaiting the committee on the poorhouse.

"And now I'm going into my future," she thought as she descended.

Miss Mintie, like a dainty ceramic, was ensconced behind her tea table, pink cheeked, with china blue eyes and slender hands. The tea kettle was old Georgian; the tea cups, Royal Worcester. The fragile chairs in the cool, shaded room were American Chippendale—inherited, not collected.

When Barbara entered with the three Miss Buttles, who had already begun to stoop, the meeting was about to be called to order. She went over and kissed Miss Mintie, with whom she was a great favorite, and then withdrew to a quiet corner.

The hierarchy was there in full force. Miss Porcelline was in command, a table before her with documents. Miss Porcelline was impressive because she served on national committees and knew the laws of procedure. She was tall and straight, of a sandy scrubbed complexion, her sparse hair stretched back in a Psyche knot, spoke with meticulous distinctness and regulated the Oxbridge charities with an austere mechanistic efficiency that was completely devoid of charity itself. Miss Doremus, who never called on newcomers until they had been seven years in Oxbridge, sat pale and pinched beside her, flanked by Miss Bisby, who was short of breath and heavy, got all names wrong, and obstinately refused to correct them. Mrs. Stark, a plump widow of 50 odd, vague and full of enthusiasms, who dearly loved a new charity with the zest of a collector, was chirping to Mrs. Pickings, who had a masculine abruptness and energy which so completely overwhelmed the meek, acquiescent husband beside her that the irreverent had dubbed them Sister and Pants. The three Miss Buttles sat together like a Greek chorus, behind the soft and fading Miss Carfax, predestined at 28 to mass affections and sympathies.

Anthony Chiswick arrived riotously and the meeting was thrown into disorder until he could be calmed down. He was a privileged character, in fact the character of Oxbridge, as the Chiswicks were the hereditary family. His adventures and his misadventures, his eccentricities, his kindnesses, his rages against entrenched injustice, his fantastic schemes and bubbling enthusiasms for local progress were part of the folk lore of the place. No one had ever looked like him, dressed like him, or declaimed with such unwearied impetuosity of gesture and invective.

After a discussion of the poorhouse, for which it was difficult to find inmates, and consideration of a highly satisfactory treasurer's report [in Oxbridge treasurer's reports were always satisfactory] the meeting resolved into lighter gossip and gradually drifted away.

"Barbara, my dear," said Miss Mintie when they were left alone, "I don't approve at all of your presence at these meetings. You are entirely too young!"

Barbara came over and sat down undecidedly.

"Another who thinks I am in danger," she thought, and, yielding to an impulse, she brought out her friend's letter and showed it to her. Miss Mintie put on her glasses and read it. Then she looked up at the girl's serious face and said sharply:

"Well, why don't you take her advice?"

"You know why, Aunt Libby."

"H'm, yes. Have you ever stood up to your father?"

"I've tried—not often—once or twice!"

"If you argue, he will always beat you. My advice is to run for it!" Barbara shook her head.

"I'd hate to do it that way." She glanced at the clock and rose. "He's coming up on the evening train. I'm going to have it out tonight," she laughed, as she kissed the dainty little lady. "Aunt Libby! Pray for me!"

"Appetizers—How to Make Them—When to Serve Them," a booklet containing directions for foreign and American appetizers, with 30 recipes, is on sale at the Tribune Public Service office, 1 South Dearborn street, for 3 cents. BY MARY MEADE.

The time to go slow on the serving of potatoes is just before the folks at home start remarking under, or over, their breaths that the Irish must have had a husky crop this year, that they guess they'll be starting sprouts if this keeps on.

And, since I have a suspicion that for most of us, that time sneaks upon us before we know it's here, may I wedge in a good word today for some of the ways we might leap, just before the family starts casting aspersions?

Thanks, and here's the word. Though they're called by the same name, sweet potatoes, you know, are quite a different sort from the Irishers. Don't inflict them on folks at the same meal, but remember them often as a substitute for Paddy. Fluffy and buttery mashed turnips, yellow or white, are more competitors for the place of the energy building starchy food. The Jerusalem artichokes, no relation to the prickly fellows you dip, are almost as highly endowed with starch as is the potato, and make a most admirable alternate.

There are about five medium Jerusalem artichokes to a pound, which will serve five quite hungry diners. The idea is to wash and pare them, then cook them whole, or sliced, in boiling water until easily punchable with a fork. Or they may be peeled, sliced, dusted with salt and pepper, and then steamed until tender. In serving these distinctively flavored affairs, I lean most toward the school which advises slices or dices offered hot with a glisten of melted butter and a dash of minced parsley, lemon juice, mace, or nutmeg.

Beans also assure you that they can stand up with potatoes as something to stick to the ribs. Soy, kidney, lima and navy types are dependable as energy givers.

But foremost among the potato rivals is the macaroni family with all its noodle, spaghetti and curlicued sisters and cousins. A main dish admitting a French influence does it this way:

2 tablespoons butter.
½ cup catsup or chili sauce.

Drop the macaroni into boiling salted water and cook for 10 minutes. Drain. Meanwhile, brown the onion and green pepper slightly in the butter. Add to them the catsup and milk. Blend. Now grease a baking dish, and in it arrange a layer of macaroni, one of cheese, then one of the onion and butter mixture. Continue in layers until all ingredients, except ½ cup of the cheese, are used, then top with the bread crumbs and the cheese, mixed. Dot with butter. Bake in a hot oven [400 degrees F.] until heated and well browned on top.

We've also treated ourselves to creamed chickens and à la kings so often that they've become almost a bore. So up to the table with—

SPAGHETTI SOUFFLE RING.
[With Chicken à la Paysanne.]

To make the ring, cook ½ package of spaghetti [broken in 4 inch lengths] in boiling salted water until tender. In the meantime prepare a white sauce with 2 tablespoons each of flour and butter, seasoning, and 2 cups of milk. Cool slightly and stir in 3 beaten egg yolks and the spaghetti. Then fold in the stiffly beaten whites. Bake in a buttered ring mold, in a pan of hot water, in a moderate oven [350 degrees F.] for half an hour or until firm. Unmold on to a hot platter garnished with parsley and fill up the inside with—

CHICKEN PAYSANNE.

For this dish, clean and cut up a 3 pound chicken in the usual pieces for frying. Make a stock of the giblets and neck. Now flour the chicken sections and brown them in ¼ cup of butter or chicken fat, in which 3 tablespoons minced onion have been simmered. When browned, add 1¼ teaspoon of salt, pepper to taste, 1 cup of stock and 2 cups of strained tomatoes. Cover, and let the whole simmer until the chicken is nearly tender. Then add a small tin of whole mushrooms and simmer until all are tender. Arrange the mushroom and chicken sections in the hot macaroni ring and pour the rich gravy over them. Garnish and serve at once.

BY NANCY CABOT.

During the early days the colonial settlers used geometric figures, such as squares and triangles, as one medium of expression in their quilt blocks. Triangles also have been the popular symbol of our feathered friends, and "Hen and Chickens" carries out this motif. White, red, and rose create the ensemble of this block that credits Maine as its state of origin.

For a pattern of this quilt design, send 5 cents in stamps or coin to Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, printing your name and address clearly. Or call at the Tribune Public Service office, One South Dearborn street.

two luncheons for him, one Wednesday at her south side home and another Thursday noon at the Casino. On Thursday evening the Percy Boyntons are entertaining for him at dinner.

Dr. and Mrs. Nitze's acquaintance with Prof. Erskine dates back to 25 years ago when they were all together at Amherst college and later at Columbia university. It will be remembered that Prof. Erskine dedicated his latest book, "Tristan and Isolde," to Prof. Nitze.

Woman's Exchange to Open Sale Today.

Mrs. Cyrus H. Adams, a director of the Chicago Woman's exchange and one of its most faithful and capable workers, will be on hand at the exchange early this morning as chairman of the marked-down sale. Everything in every department will be sold at a bargain price and, since the exchange is noted for the bargains it has when it has a sale, there is sure to be a crowd of shoppers.

Serving at the buffet luncheon table today will be Mrs. Britton I. Budd, Mrs. Wilbur C. Smith, and Mrs. Eugene Cary Jr. The late Mrs. Edward I. Cudahy used to open her home at State parkway and Burton place one day every year for the marked down sale, but since her death the annual sale has been held at the exchange, 942 North Michigan avenue. It lasts for as many days as it takes to dispose of all the bargains.

Tea to Be Given Today for Dancer and Singer.

With the Laird Bells on the high seas Berlin bound, their daughter, Miss Helen Bell, and Mrs. Bell's sister, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, will be hostesses this afternoon at the tea Mrs. Bell is giving at the Arts club for Nini Theilade, the dancer, and Grete Stueckgold, soprano with the Metropolitan Opera company. Tomorrow evening these two stars are to give a joint recital in Orchestra hall for the benefit of the Vocational Society for Shut-ins.

It is to be gala evening tomorrow with many dinner parties before the performance. Mrs. Meta Dewes Burgweger, president of the Vocational society, will entertain at one of the largest dinners, having invited 15 guests. Mr. and Mrs. H. Paul Juergens will entertain an equal number at dinner and the recital for their daughter and son-in-law, the young John Hurleys, who are just home from their wedding trip.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr. have arranged a box party with the Donald McPhersons and the Orville Taylors as their guests, while Mr. and Mrs. William B. Hale and the Alfred Hamills will be the box guests of Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Barnes. The George Rasmussens have invited Mr. and Mrs. Peter Bering Nelsen and Mr. and Mrs. Jens Eriksen to attend the recital with them.

Mr. and Mrs. Bell are on their way to Berlin, where Mr. Bell will attend the conference of Germany's long term creditors at the Reichsbank Jan. 22. He will represent American holders of German foreign bonds on behalf of the Foreign Bondholders' Protective council.

Dozens of Parties for Opera Tonight.

With "Lohengrin" the attraction this evening at the Civic Opera house, dozens of parties have been planned by those who are regular Monday night box patrons and others who have taken boxes just for this evening.

Mrs. Jacob Baur, who is leaving this week for a brief New York holiday, will have a double box party, while Mrs. Joseph Leiter will occupy her Monday night box for the first time this opera season, since she is just at home from a month's holiday. Other hosts and hostesses will be Ira Nelson Morris, Mr. and Mrs. Albert F. Madlener Jr., the Wirt Mortons, Consul General Giuseppe Castruccio, Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed, and Mrs. R. Townsend McKeever, Mrs. Arthur Farwell and Mrs. William S. Monroe have taken a main floor box for a group of Girl Scouts, who will attend the performance in their gray green uniforms.

George B. Woodruff brought interesting news from New York Saturday of a spectacular performance to be heard the evenin of Jan. 24. The details will be announced this week. This means that "Coq d'Or" will be given on the 22d [its premiere in Chicago] so there will be two exciting events in the opera the week after this.

Among those who have made reservations for the round table luncheon of the Lake Shore League of Women Voters today at the Arts club are Mrs. Augustus A. Carpenter, Mrs. Mitchell D. Follansbee, Mrs. William Ennis, Mrs. Wentworth Field, Mrs. Quincy Wright, Miss Joanna Fortune, Miss Eloise ReQua, Mrs. Ralph T. Winston, and Mrs. Murry Nelson. Frederick Guthem, secretary of the Illinois housing commission, will speak on "Slum Clearance and the New Housing Plan."

Cards were in the week-end mail for the reception the Arts club is to have from 4 to 6 next Friday afternoon for Bernard Boutet De Monvel, who is coming here for the exhibition of water colors and drawings of his father, Maurice Boutet De Monvel, to open Friday in the club galleries. On the same day the paintings of Rapazoff will be hung.

Boutet De Monvel is certain to enjoy his visit in Chicago, for several small and informal parties have been planned for him, and gay informality is what delights him most of all. Of course, there is the "bal comique" the Goodspeeds are planning for Saturday evening at the Saddle and Cycle club. The Arthur Cables have reserved Friday evening for an amusing dinner of some kind, and Mrs. Howard Linn has tentatively set Saturday noon as the time for a luncheon for the visitor.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Watching an incident recently, it was plain to see how certain set habits, that have nothing to do with beauty, affect the set of the mouth and chin. Proving that the bromide about thoughts governing beauty is no bromide but warning fact.

It was such a trivial thing over which to clinch the jaws in a hard set line! Such a trivial thing over which to keep them set and ugly for an evening. The "presumption" of one of the party assigning seats in the car was the cause of indigation. It was presumptuous, to be sure, and it was the hostess' right to do the assigning. But, goodness, nothing short of a personal assault on said hostess was worth that entire evening's expression.

Well, we're all probably given to setting those jaws and looking our "rights" at some time or other. And perhaps in the struggle keeping up with the rent and the automobile installments the jaw and chin can't be blamed for an occasional hard look. But, lawdy me, we've got to watch that the habit doesn't get us! Not for our soul's sake, sisters, but for our faces.

In the pursuit of our duties, we get to looking mighty serious, the most of us. And the truth is, if we don't look fairly seriously after them, it's a case of extinction. But don't you wonder sometimes if folk like you and me couldn't "smile our work up a bit?"

The woman of the guest seating [illegible] the kind of fine, admirable [illegible] everything grand and properly. Things must be just so. I know the kind. The big things don't bother her—but how the little [illegible] try her chin and jaw and mouth set. A demon for manicures and facials and perfectly arranged hair! But that battle-ax jawline when her plans are disturbed! It's a luxury no jawline can afford.

Lauds Women for Concert of Symphony

Evelyn Levin Davis Called Success as Soloist.

BY EDWARD MOORE.

Without question the Woman's Symphony orchestra has built itself up until it is one of the superior musical attractions of the city. Yesterday afternoon's program in the Gold room of the Congress hotel, conducted by Ebba Sundstrom, displayed not only ambition but accomplishment.

Sibelius' Second Symphony, which opened the program, received a performance of a kind to renew faith in this eager and talented group of women. It had a fine tone in the string section particularly, with some excellent additions from the leaders of the flute, clarinet, and oboe sections. It also had the impulse of pace, clear lines, and climax from Conductor Sundstrom, and all of these count as assets in a performance.

The soloist was Evelyn Levin Davis, who in ordinary circumstances is the concertmaster of the orchestra. Mrs. Davis projected two important reasons for her marked success; one, that she is a violinist of both imagination and great technical ability; the other, that she chose some highly attractive solos of infrequent hearing. Her first was the Vivaldi Concerto in C of the Kreisler arrangement. The other was the Ysaye transcription of the Saint-Saëns piano number "Etude en Forme de Valse." Mrs. Davis made a great and well deserved hit with a large audience.

In addition to the symphony, the orchestra played Liszt's "Tasso: lamento e trionfo" and the overture to Sinigaglia's "Le Baruffe Chiozzotte."

Harold Bauer and Ossip Gabrilowitsch, two notable artists who used to lead the world in recitals of music for two pianos, returned to Orchestra hall yesterday afternoon in a proof that they have not forgotten the art. By joint consent, theirs is the music for both professors and students of the piano, and they played the Mozart Sonata in D. Bach's "Italian" Concerto, and other works, by Schubert, Schumann, Albeniz, and Saint-Saëns, with a deftness and commanding authority.

The Saturday night performance of the Chicago Grand Opera company introduced several notable features. As an added attraction it began with Ravel's "Bolero" in the choreography by Ruth Page and executed by her, Harald Kreutzberg, and their ballet, a colorful, striking, a dramatic setting of a famous piece of music. Paul Kerby conducted.

"Il Trovatore," which followed, introduced a new member of the company, the baritone, Carlo Morelli, who would seem to be destined to be a notable. He has a voice of power, resonance, and charm; he is a fine looking individual and is apparently a personality of the stage. In addition Rosa Raisa was at the top of her most glorious form, Eleanor La Mance made the greatest hit of her Chicago career, Aroldo Lindi, though suffering with a cold, did some fine things, and Amund Sjovik, though in a lesser rôle, added to the fine performances he has already given. Gennaro Papi, a great director of Italian opera, conducted.

MacChesney is founder and honorary president of the organization, which has planned similar fetes in honor of other Latin American countries by way of fostering friendly relations between the nations.

Dinner will be served at 6:30, and will be followed by a program demonstrating Colombia's cultural and industrial progress. Gen. De Fallon will interpret the country's history and the psychology of its people. Senor Camacho Leon will explain a film depicting the potentialities and industries of his country. Carlos Molina, a native of Colombia, will be in charge of the artistic part of the program, and will direct his own orchestra as part of the entertainment.

Art Galleries Ready to Open New Showings

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

This week, as last, sees the opening of several interesting exhibitions. The Chester H. Johnson galleries, Fine Arts building, have hung an attractive group of gouache paintings by the Frenchman, Jean Lurcat. They are charming in color. In subject they deal with the sea and the bathing beach. Lurcat has a clever sense of design and decorative effect and, though he repeats his theme in picture after picture, he does it with the versatility of a master, barring any feeling of monotony.

The Lurcat beach scenes are in amusing contrast to the gouache paintings by Georges Rouault installed with them. Rouault is well known for his somber and dark palette. We find again his favorite subjects of clowns and women, many cleverly presented personalities. One of the finest is the "Tragedian," painted surprisingly in rich color. Again there is a painting in lighter tones with the picturesque landscape depicting a mountain roadside traveled by a family of peasants trudging along beside their laden donkey.

Water colors and drawings by Seurat, Bonnard, De Segonzac, and Toulouse-Lautrec, and a brilliant pastel by Degas, complete the exhibit.

In the Tudor gallery, Chicago Woman's club, portraits and landscapes by Curt J. H. Drewes hold the attention. Illustrations for various murals are also on view. Farther south, in their galleries in the Fairfax hotel, the South Side Art association presents its January exhibit of paintings and sculpture by artist members. There is many a good piece of painting in this show.

An exhibit of water colors by Frederic Dalrymple and of sculpture by Helen Adele Lurch Miller opens today in the Lord Nelson room, Drake hotel, under the auspices of the All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts.

An exhibition of water colors by Rainey Bennett opened Saturday in the Increase Robinson gallery, Diana Court building. For a last exhibit paintings by Romolo Roberti have just been placed on view in the Findlay galleries, 424 South Michigan avenue.

INSTALLMENT XLIX.

THE FAMILY CIRCLE.

Young Boris Pomeroy paused in his ninth effort to climb over the rail and looked at his father suspiciously. He was being talked about, but he was not sure the comment was enthusiastic. He grasped the rail with both hands, hopped onto the lower crosspiece, lifted a sturdy foot to the top piece with great difficulty, and strained upward till his small face grew purple. His mother sighed.

"We'll have to make that railing higher," she said. "He'll be over it in a day or two more. That makes the third time we've changed it since we put it up the first of May. I've never known such a persistent child. When he starts anything, he simply keeps after it till he gets it."

"And we know where he got that trait," Mme. Orleneff said smilingly.

"If he climbs to the top of that rail he may fall and break his neck," his father remarked, and then cursed himself for a fool as his wife gasped and started forward.

"Take him out," she said quickly. "I won't leave him there any longer."

"Dearest, please take him out this minute."

"Darling, don't be a goose," Bruce begged. "He can't possibly get up there—though he may burst a blood vessel if he keeps on trying. Hi, old man, go and play with the puppy a while," he suggested urgently.

His son did not approve of the idea. He strained, puffed and panted. Irma unlocked the little gate, entered the enclosure, and made inviting sounds.

"Come with mummy and daddy," she cooed.

"No."

Master Pomeroy took a fresh grip on the railing and lifted his sturdy little body till his eyes bulged. Bruce entered the enclosure, detached him from the railing and lifted him to his shoulder. Boris opened his mouth very wide, glanced at his father's face, and thoughtfully closed his mouth again.

"Tate wat," he suggested.

He set the boy down and the child's brilliant face darkened again. Once more he looked at his father, and once more he checked a howl of protest. The walk might be pleasant. The puppy gamboled up to them and Boris the Third grasped its tail.

"I thought," Irma said, "that when we got the enclosure for him he'd be safe for an hour or two a day, anyway. But I see that some one will still have to watch him every second. He's been in the fountain twice and in the duck pond four times this week. But tell me, darling—did you ever see such a beautiful, wonderful, clever child as we've got?"

"He'll do," Bruce said placidly. "He has all his faculties."

Mme. Orleneff laughed.

"Keep calm, Irma," she said. "Bruce worships the ground the child walks on, as you say in this country, but he doesn't spoil him as you do."

Bruce looked at his wife and his heart swelled. She was adorable—beautiful to look at, and the most companionable and serene of wives to live with. She treated him at times as if he were another small Boris, and the fact occasionally irritated him. Once or twice, but only for a moment, he had heard the echo of another woman's hands beating at the door of his life. But in his heart he never doubted that he had chosen wisely.

He was as happy as he could reasonably expect to be. Whatever might come to him later, life was serene now. His business was surviving the inevitable setback of these difficult times. Boris the Second, after a hectic first year in the new field of business, was now really getting on in the third situation Bruce had found for him. Olga and Henry seemed content, and Olga had developed into an ornament of high social circles. She had a little girl, Zinaida, two months younger than Boris the Third, to whom she was devoted and to whom she referred to as "the Brat." Zinaida had much of her mother's temperament. Bruce grinned now as he recalled the monkey and parrot time his kid and Olga's had when they got together. There was need of supervision then, all right.

He took his mother-in-law's arm and slipped his other arm around Irma's waist as they walked to the house. Here were the two women he loved—his wife, and the woman who had taken the place of the mother he had hardly known. Around him stretched the lawns and gardens of his country home. Before him gamboled his temperamental son, racing with the ecstatic puppy. All this he owed to Boris Orleneff the First, and in part to Boris Orleneff the Second, who had so abruptly jerked him out of his business routine and into a new life.

If any one had told him then that he would ever love Boris Orleneff the Second as a younger brother, he would have jeered at the notion. Nevertheless, he did love him. His family circle would not be really complete till Boris and Herbert Schuyler arrived for dinner and the week-end—Herbert Schuyler—that New York parasite who had come to a Maine island in January, and in the worst blizzard in twenty years, to look into the matter of a stranger's safety. Bruce had learned many things from Herbert Schuyler. Altogether, life was a queer business!

Talk Religion Over Previous to Wedding Day

BY DORIS BLAKE.

He is 35 and of Protestant faith. She is 29 and a Catholic.

"When we started going together," he relates, "religion did not enter into our discussions at all. But now, when it comes to marrying me, which the girl says she will, she insists that the marriage shall be performed by a priest and with a Catholic ceremony. I hear that in order to be so married one must turn Catholic. It is not possible for me to do this, after 35 years in my own faith. What can be done about it?"

One does not have to become a Catholic in order to be married by a priest. But one does have to promise to conform to certain regulations about bringing the children up as Catholics before a priest will perform the ceremony.

The thing for a Catholic and non-Catholic to do, where contemplating marriage, is to go to the parish priest and discuss the matter openly with him. Let him present the regulations, as he gladly will, and explain the church rules attending marriage ceremonies. This should be done before marriage invitations are sent out, or before public announcement is made at all. Then, if the non-Catholic cannot accept the rules laid down by the church, he can say so without embarrassment about breaking off the marriage plans, if he so wills. There is no compromise with the laws as prescribed by the church, and so familiarity with them is recommended ahead of time. In fact, where a couple of these differing faiths meet, and show a strong inclination one toward the other, the marriage problem should be discussed openly and frankly. If it is impossible, then, for one to accept the mandates of the church, the separation of the couple might ensue before the emotions are too heavily involved. This question of religious difference is no light one, when put to such a test as marriage.

There Is One Way TO KNOW!

Applesauce is one of the best sauces for any meal: Do you know the right kind of apples to make perfect applesauce? Did you ever think about the time you spend in the kitchen—peeling, coring and standing over a hot stove?

Why not try a uniform grade—a sauce made by those who know just the right kind of apples to use and the exact time to cook them.

is a blend of apples of distinctly different flavors

Testing is believing—so just order a can of applesauce from your grocer today. You will like it.

RECIPE FOR BROWN BETTY

4 cups soft bread crumbs
½ cup melted butter
1½ cups Canned Applesauce
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
Juice of 1 lemon

Yield—6 to 8 Servings

Put bread crumbs moistened with butter in baking dish, in alternate layers with Canned Applesauce, having top layer of crumbs. Sprinkle each layer with lemon juice, rind and cinnamon. Cover and bake in moderate oven (350°F.) about one-half hour.

Uncover the last 15 minutes to brown. May be served with Hard Sauce.

MINUTE MYSTERY

By H. A. RIPLEY

A FATAL ROMANCE.

"Mary Millington and I were walking here along the pier—we were engaged, you know," sobbed Howard Weld, "when, absolutely without warning, some one, or it might have been two people, pushed us into the ocean.

"I'm not a very strong swimmer and the night was pitch dark," he continued in a strained voice. "I hollered to Mary—received no reply, but groping around, I finally caught hold of the light coat she was wearing and tried to rescue her. She slipped from my grasp though, and it was all I could do to make it to that pile, climb up it, and pull myself onto the pier. I was so exhausted——"

Prof. Fordney interrupted with a wave of his hand, then got down on his knees and crawled the ten feet from the pile to the edge of the rather rickety pier where something seemed to engage his attention. No one spoke while he reached over and, with the stick he was carrying, fished around in the water below.

Returning to the group where stood Weld, he asked him: "About how much did Miss Millington weigh?"

"About a hundred and ten, I'd say. You see——"

"And was her coat light in weight or in color?" inquired Fordney.

"Both," was the prompt response. "Was she wearing your engagement ring when you fell into the water?"

"Why—I didn't notice particularly, but I imagine so. Why?"

The criminologist felt in his pocket, turned to Inspector Kelley and said: "Better hold young Weld. If he didn't murder the girl why is he lying?"

WHY DID FORDNEY BELIEVE HE WAS LYING?

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 14.—The Chicago Bears, with a dazzling repertoire of tricks, gave a scoring lesson to Ernie Pinckert's team of coast all-stars before a sell-out crowd of 24,000 in Wrigley field today.

The National Professional league champions, playing for a percentage to the biggest turnout of their barnstorming tour, were led to a 26 to 7 victory by Red Grange, who scored twice in the first quarter. Another touchdown was added in the second period, and one in the fourth.

Saunders Goes Over.

The Pinckert team, displaying individual prowess equal to that of the professionals, but lacking both a Bill Hewitt to bust up plays and an offense with a chance of scoring inside Chicago's 20 yard line, saw all of its power dissipated in mid-field.

Russell Saunders, formerly of University of Southern California, now an assistant director in Hollywood, sliced off tackle for the all-stars' only touchdown at the end of an 80 yard march in the second period.

The Bears took complete command of the game at the outset and led 13 to 0 at the end of the first period. Midway in the quarter, after Nagurski had pulled the Chicago team out of a hole with a 23 yard advance to the 26 yard line, Brumbaugh, who noticed Pinckert's team was overshifting to the strong side, called a reverse to the weak side. Grange cut over tackle, shook off two tacklers, and ran 74 yards to score. Griffith chased Red the last 30 yards, but couldn't catch him and failed in a last effort with a flying tackle at the goal line. The pass from center was wabbly and Manders missed the attempted conversion.

Grange Scores Again.

Four minutes later, with the ball on the Bears' 45 yard line, Doehring snapped one of his left hand forward passes to Grange in the flat zone and Red continued thirty-five yards to score. Doehring fumbled the pass from center which he was trying to hold in position for Manders to kick, but jumped up and passed to Hewitt in the end zone for the extra point.

The Bears were penalized for having only ten men on the field to start Pinckert's team on its march to its only touchdown on the first play of the second quarter. The 15-yard penalty put Los Angeles on the Bears' 49 yard line. Musick hit the line for four yards and Saunders was stopped at the line, but an offside by the Bears put the ball on the 40 yard line. Saunders sliced off right tackle on the old favorite U. S. C. power play, and went 21 yards to the Bears' 19-yard line.

Bears Pull a Nifty.

Musick and Saunders picked up two yards, then Musso of the Bears drove through to nail Apsit for a six yard loss. On the next play Saunders passed to tackle Smith, used as an end on the formation, on the 6 yard line. One smash at the line failed, but Saunders swept around right end to score. Musick converted on a placement.

The Bears then executed a sensational triple pass, Manders forward passing to Karr, who lateralled to Hewitt. Hewitt ran 20 yards and then lateralled back to Karr, but G. Sargent, a guard, pulled Karr down on the All-Star's 34-yard line after a 35-yard gain. On the next play Hewitt's long pass to Karr grounded in the end zone.

The Bears, providing one thrill after another, uncorked another long distance scoring play near the end of the half when Battles crashed back through the weak side and charged 53 yards up the field to the goal behind Manders, who sent two would-be tacklers sprawling in the last 15 yards. Manders kicked the extra point.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Blackhawks last night shook off the epidemic of ties which had beset them for nights and nights and stepped out to a jolly 4 to 0 triumph over the New York Americans, who impudently got a tie when they opened the season here Nov. 4. Ten thousand fans saw the Hawks score their first victory in the five games of the long home stand.

It was necessary for the Hawks to perform valiantly or surrender their claim to leadership in the United States division of the National Hockey league. Before the game at the Stadium was half over returns from the east showed the Detroit Red Wings to have beaten the Boston Bruins and the New York Rangers to have trimmed the Montreal Maroons.

Victory Was Imperative.

The Hawks just had to step on it—a defeat would have plunged them in third place and a tie would have thrown them in a tie for second place. But the victory enabled them to conclude the first half of their schedule in a first place tie with the Rangers, a point ahead of the Red Wings and 7 points ahead of the Bruins.

The first accomplishment in meeting the night's emergency requirements was a goal which Lionel Conacher plucked out of a passing bee in the Americans' defense zone in 17:25 of he first period.

The series of events which led to this achievement began with a pass from Romnes to Thompson, who passed out to Conacher 10 feet in front of the nets. Conacher's first shot was kicked back by Goalie Worters, whereupon Lionel shoved home the rubber for the score that proved enough to win. Both Romnes and Thompson were awarded assists.

Gottselig Gets Going.

There were two scores in the second period, both by Johnny Gottselig, the Hawks' leading scorer, and from time to time the leading scorer in the United States division this year.

Johnny's first goal was a surprising thing, a long shot from near the right boards a point almost on a continuation of the goal line. Johnny must have shot a curve, because the puck skimmed Worters' tummy and caught the far side of the net almost a foot inside the first post and three feet above the ice. This freak one was an unassisted effort in 5:10.

There was nothing freakish about Gottselig's next one, registered in 11:45 on assists by Conacher and Leswick. The tabulation involved a nice bit of stick swishing which saw Worters responding to Johnny's lightning feinting just as Johnny wanted him to in his headon dash for the cage.

Hawks Face Busy Week.

The fourth Hawk goal was scored by Paul Thompson in 18:20 of the final period and was virtually a duplicate of the play in which he scored Thursday night, only to have the referee call it back. Last night it counted.

The Americans, trying frantically to avoid a shutout, moved up five men when Leswick was bounced off for tripping. Thompson got the puck in his own defense zone and this time there was no chance to call an offside pass. He skated two-thirds the length of the rink, then calmly teased Worters into a dance, after which he slid home the disk with consummate grace.

The Hawks now face the most arduous week of the year, including their first Saturday-Sunday stint of the season. Tuesday night they will play the Maroons at Montreal; Thursday it's the Rangers at New York; Saturday night the Leafs at Toronto, and Sunday night the Maroons here.

SILVER FOOTBALL.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S tenth annual Silver Football, awarded to the Big Ten player of greatest value to his team, will be presented to Joe Laws of the University of Iowa between halves of the Iowa-Illinois basketball game tonight. Director of Athletics Lauer writes from Iowa City that approximately 12,000 spectators are expected to be present to view Iowa's title seeking five and to honor the Hawkeye gridiron hero.

Laws, quarter back, field general, and ball carrier of the renascent Iowa eleven, was named for the honor by the Board of Award in a close vote over Pug Lund of the University of Minnesota. This board consists of ten conference coaches, ten conference officials, Commissioner Griffith, Wilfrid Smith, and Harvey Woodruff. With first choice counting two points and second choice one point in the balloting, Laws received 23 points and Lund 17.

The Silver Football, a sterling silver replica, actual size, of the gridiron oval, is a handsome trophy which becomes the permanent property of the winner. In addition, Laws will receive a white gold football, watch fob size, as the choice of his Iowa teammates for the honor. Nine other similar white gold footballs will be given candidates named by their teammates of the nine other conference elevens.

This Silver Football idea, originally sponsored for the purpose of fostering sportsmanship, leadership, and self-sacrifice of individual interest to team unity when necessary, has far exceeded even expectations of THE TRIBUNE sports department when it was first announced in 1924. It has come to be regarded as the greatest honor to which a conference football player may aspire.

Joe Laws is a creditable addition to the list of former holders, which includes in order from 1924, Red Grange of Illinois, Tim Lowry of Northwestern, Benny Friedman of Michigan, Ken Rouse of Chicago, Chuck Bennett of Indiana, Bill Glassgow of Iowa, Wesley Fesler of Ohio State, Clarence Munn of Minnesota, and Harry Newman of Michigan.

Laws not only was a great individual football player, but he also possessed to a notable degree the other attributes considered in the award—sportsmanship, leadership, and the spirit of self-sacrifice for the good of the team as a whole. He is extremely popular among the student body. His college expenses are met, in part, by his own efforts.

The Wake congratulates the young man on the honor earned, and the University of Iowa for having such a worthy candidate.

MILES MISSES A NEW AIR RECORD BY FEW SECONDS

Jimmie Wedell Speeds 253.717 M. P. H.

LEE MILES.

Miles failed in two attempts to crack the world's mark for single seater planes over the 100 kilometer course, missing in his last effort by a narrow margin, but led the field home in a competitive speed dash.

Miles was timed at an average of 194.511 miles an hour over the 15 mile triangular course in the speed dash, with Art Chester of Joliet, Ill., coming in second with an average of 192.877 miles. The world's record is 195.818 miles. S. J. Wittman of Oshkosh, Wis., was third at an average of 182.452 miles an hour, with Roger Don Rae of Lamont, Ill., fourth, at 180.813.

Wedell Flies 253.717 M. P. H.

Hughes, flying a special plane [Boeing] of the type used by the army and navy as pursuit planes, nearly lapped his nearest competitor in the sportsman pilot free for all event. He was timed at 185.707 miles an hour over a 20 mile course. Sam Sague of Cleveland, O., was second to Hughes, flying his low wing monoplane an average of 142.804 miles an hour.

Wedell, in a special speed dash, was clocked at an average speed of 253.717 miles an hour over two laps of 15 miles, but the time was not official because judges in the northwest pylon reported he cut approximately 100 feet inside the marker. Wedell flew the first lap at 264.90 miles an hour and the second at 243.506.

Miles' attempts were made on the world's record for the 100 kilometer [62.137] miles closed course. The mark of 207.39 miles an hour was established May 22, 1931, by a French pilot, Delmottee.

The first effort failed when Miles had difficulty in finding the northern end of the course. He flew the distance with an average speed of 116.125 miles an hour and an elapsed time of 32 minutes 6½ seconds. On his second flight, which so nearly resulted in victory, Miles combated a stiff cross-wind. His speed was averaged at 205.987 miles an hour, 1.307 miles an hour below the record.

BUFFALO WINS OVER CHICAGO IN LACROSSE

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 14.—[Special.]—The Buffalo Indians, smarting under the two straight defeats at the hands of the Chicago Blue Ribbons last week, defeated the Chicagoans, 16 to 9, tonight in a National Lacrosse league contest.

The game was delayed more than an hour due to the late arrival of the Chicagoans who came here by automobile.

After establishing a 5 to 2 lead in the first half, the Indians were shut out for the first time this season in the third period.

M'CAULIFF AND SUTTER CAPTURE MIAMI DOUBLES

Miami, Fla., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Cliff Sutter of New Orleans, and Gene McCauliff of New York, the national indoor champions, won the Miami Biltmore doubles title here today, defeating Frank Shields of New York and Ricardo Morales of Cuba, 2-6, 7-5, 6-3, 6-0, in a sharply played final.

Purdue Seeks Fourth Big Ten Triumph Tonight at Wisconsin

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Purdue leads in the race for the Western conference basketball championship. The Boilermakers whipped Indiana Saturday night at Bloomington, 47 to 13, and thus disposed of one of their rivals in a victory of such surprising proportions that it can be matched only by Minnesota's conquest of Iowa, 39 to 38.

Even those who thought that Coach Ward Lambert's team would whip Indiana, which is an old Lafayette custom, did not hope for such an overwhelming triumph. It set a 1934 record for one sided play. While only one point separated the Hawkeyes and the Gophers, the result was as startling as the Indiana-Purdue fracas. Iowa previously had disposed of Northwestern and Wisconsin, while Minnesota had lost to Purdue and Northwestern.

Scoring Record for Season.

Purdue set a one game scoring record for the season, 47 points, which surpassed its own previous mark of 45 points, made against Minnesota in the opening game, and this brings the Boilermaker total for three contests to 128 points, 17 more than Iowa, which now has won two games and lost one. Purdue's defensive record also is best in the Big Ten, for the Boilermakers only have 64 points against them. Wisconsin, in a four way tie for sixth place, is second defensively, with 75 points scored by opponents.

Purdue's victory Saturday night makes the clash this evening with Wisconsin the all important game in the conference. This is particularly true since the Badgers, back from a disastrous road trip which saw them lose to Illinois and Iowa, whipped Michigan Saturday night. If Purdue can get back home with four consecutive victories it will have an advantage on all opponents.

Badgers May Give Trouble.

On the other hand, Wisconsin, which was coupled with Iowa in the preseason "book" on the Big Ten race, may give Purdue more trouble than any previous opponent. Wisconsin will have an advantage in height, but in floor play the odds favor Purdue.

Northwestern, almost as surprising as Purdue in offensive play, defeated Ohio State Saturday night, 32 to 25, and tonight meets Michigan at Patten gymnasium. The Wildcats, who tied with the Buckeyes for the title last year, so far have done better than their most ardent friends thought they could do. After losing the opening game to Iowa at Iowa City, Northwestern has beaten Minnesota as well as Ohio State.

Illinois at Iowa.

Illinois now will test Iowa on the Hawkeyes' court. Although the Illini came home in front of the inexperienced Maroon sophomores Saturday at the Midway, 32 to 26, they did not display an impressive brand of ball. Iowa probably will win, especially since the reverse at Minneapolis will spur Iowa onward.

Indiana, winner in the first tilt with Ohio State, 38 to 22, finishes the series with the Buckeyes tonight at Columbus.

Dartmouth Looks Over 106 Coaches

Boston, Mass., Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Dartmouth athletic council, during a 10 hour session, today graded a few candidates for its head football coachship and instructed Athletic Director Harry R. Hennegan to make the final arrangements necessary for the appointment of a successor to Jackson Cannell.

GUS DORAIS.

Clarence G. McDavitt of Boston, the council chairman, said the qualifications of 106 coaches were closely studied during today's session before the field was narrowed down to a bare handful.

"We have narrowed the field down to a reasonable number," McDavitt said, "and graded the survivors. The next step to be taken is to interview our first choice and find out whether or not he is available. If he is not, then the second on the list will be contacted and so on. In the event that none of our final choices are willing to assume charge of Dartmouth football, the council will have to meet again and go through the same laborious procedure."

McDavitt intimated, however, that the council was reasonably sure that every one on its final list was in a receptive mood for a Dartmouth football offer.

The name most frequently mentioned in connection with Dartmouth's vacant football berth is that of Jim Marks, head master of the Kiskiminetas preparatory school, who developed many of the current crop of football stars. He has admitted conferring with Dartmouth authorities and it is understood that he is willing to attempt the task of rebuilding the Green's football fortunes if he is given faculty ranking and an opportunity to continue his classroom career.

Gus Dorais of Detroit, said to have strong backing from the midwest alumni groups, is also believed to be well up in the running, and Ossie Solem of Iowa, Dick Harlow of Western Maryland, Bernie Bierman of Minnesota, and Ike Armstrong of Utah are said to be among the others under consideration.

Thomson to Meet Creavy Today for Coast Golf Title

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Jim Thomson of Long Beach, Cal., and Tom Creavy of Albany, N. Y., will battle it out here tomorrow in the 36 hole final of the San Francisco National Match Play Open championship.

Creavy, who won the P. G. A. championship in 1932, eliminated John Rogers of Denver, Colo., tournament medalist and one of the favorites, 3 and 2.

The two finalists will meet tomorrow for the major share of the $4,000 prize money. The winner will receive $811 and the runnerup $535. Losing semi-finalists each received $259, with Rogers taking an additional $50 as medalist.

Boucher's Two Goals Give New York Victory.

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—The New York Rangers held their tie with the Blackhawks at the top of the National Hockey league's American division at the half way point of the season tonight by defeating the Montreal Maroons, 3 to 1.

FRANK BOUCHER.

Frank Boucher, veteran ranger center, was the standout performer with two goals scored on clever individual performances. They put the game away after Butch Keeling had netted the opening goal halfway through the second period. The Maroon didn't score until the second minute before the finish when Jimmy Ward hoisted a shot into an almost unprotected net.

The game was marred a bit by lax officiating which allowed the defense players to get away with holding, hooking, and occasional tripping.

DETROIT BEATS BOSTON

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 14.—(AP)—The Detroit Red Wings tonight defeated the Boston Bruins, 2 to 0, with Frank Carson, veteran wing forward, getting both goals.

Carson gave his team a lead early in the second period when he beat Thompson, Bruin goalie, after taking a perfect pass from Emms. The teams played fairly evenly until late in the third period, when Carson again scored after grabbing a loose puck at center ice and outracing Clapper to the net.

Talking it Over

BY ARCH WARD.

"IT'S a boy," reads the little blue card from Mr. and Mrs. Charles Arthur Shires. . . . Paul Prehn, former chairman of the Illinois Athletic commission, will referee the Centralia Golden Glove bouts . . . Paul has three or four University of Illinois boxers who are expected to earn their way to the Tournament of Champions at Chicago Stadium. . . . Paddy Hennelly of Dublin, who was defeated by Freddie Caserio of Chicago in the 160 pound match at the international Golden Glove bouts last summer, has met with a serious accident. . . . Paddy is a Dublin policeman. . . . A few weeks ago he saw a little girl run into the path of an automobile and he tried to save her. . . . The car skidded, killing the child and breaking Paddy's arm and leg. . . . His boxing days are over. . . . De Paul university is the only large school in the country which remains undefeated this season in football and basketball. . . .

The 9 year old son of Mickey Cochrane, manager of the Detroit Tigers, accidentally shot a playmate in the back last week, but the bullet inflicted only a superficial wound. . . . Joe Chamberlain, the Houdini shortstop whom the White Sox bought from Waterloo of the Mississippi Valley league in 1931, has been reinstated by Commissioner Landis after a year's ineligibility. . . . The Sox could seldom locate and never were able to surround the inveterate nomad. . . . The Stadium offered Schmeling and Levinsky 60 per cent of the receipts if they would fight on the west side Feb. 16. . . . That was considered a generous split, but Jim Mullen gave 67½ per cent for a middleweight title bout between Tiger Flowers and Mickey Walker at the Coliseum several years ago and made a pro't of $15,000. . . . He gave 65 per cent to Mike McTigue and Walker in 1927 and claims to have pocketed $10,000 as his end. . . . Mr. Mullen, however, is no longer in the promotional field. . . .

JACKIE SHARKEY AND RODAK TO MEET TONIGHT

Fight Windup Bout on Midway Card.

Leo Rodak, Chicago featherweight, and Jackie Sharkey of Minneapolis, Minn., will meet in an eight round bout tonight at Midway arena, 6115 Cottage Grove avenue. Sharkey is the best opponent the former Golden Gloves champion has faced in his 11 professional contests, all of which he won.

Sharkey lost a 10 round decision to Freddy Miller, featherweight champion, in a title bout at Cincinnati, O., Jan 1. He has been beaten only twice in 21 matches here.

With a view toward extending Rodak's winning streak his handlers last Monday hired Young Geno of La Salle, Ill., as a sparmate. Geno instructed Leo on Sharkey's weak points.

Geno met Sharkey twice in 10 round matches, at Northwest stadium last Sept. 20 and at La Salle, Oct. 30. The Minneapolis fighter won both on close decisions. Supporting contests:

Gene Higgins vs. Eddie Chiuski [5], 142.
Lenny Cohen vs. Paul Lee [4], 120.
John Mirabal vs. Fred Gravelle [4], 128.
Ed Van Herrick vs. Frank Walsh [wrestling].

Another professional show tonight brings together Solly Dukelsky, local middleweight, and Fritz Heinz of Saginaw, Mich., at Marigold Gardens, Broadway and Grace street.

Heinz beat Bud Saltis in one of three matches here last summer. Dukelsky, who compiled a creditable record as a welterweight, is making his first start at 160 pounds. Sammy Levine and Johnny Fitzpatrick, feather weights, box the six round semi-final. Other matches:

Adolph Wiater and Walter Madey [5], heavyweights.
Jackie Osborne and Patsy Pollock [4], 145.
Jackie Collins and Floyd Embrey [4], 118.
Al Woznica and Leo Arminetti [wrestling].

The midwest amateur boxing tournament will open tonight at Arcadia Gardens, 4444 Broadway, with contests in the featherweight, lightweight, welterweight, and middleweight classes. Flyweight, bantamweight, light heavyweight, and heavyweight entrants compete next Monday. On Jan. 30 the finals in all weights will be presented.

There will be 16 contests tonight at three rounds of two minutes each. Drawing will be lot. Eight ounce gloves will be used in all classes.

Anthony Zale, Jack Coleman, George Rodamaker, Paul Frazier, and Vernon Daniels compete in the middleweight division. James Henry Sullivan, national guard titleholder, is a leading contender for featherweight title. His toughest opponent is expected to be Art Brewer, Savoy Athletic club champion, who finished second in the Central A. A. U. tournament last year.

Entries for the Illinois Athletic club's second annual amateur boxing tournament Jan. 23 and 24 will close Saturday. Almost a hundred boxers already have entered and indications are that the entry list will be twice that of last year.

The eight weight divisions are well fortified. Tom Kenneally and Chester Bukowski, representatives of the C. Y. O., are in the heavyweight class. Ambrose Geoghegan of the Amaizo Athletic club, appears strongest in the 175 pound division. In the middleweight ranks there is Levi Piersson, 1931 Illinois state titleholder, and John De Kovic and John Plevonich appear to be the best welterweights.

Other contenders are Bob Engelskirchen, German American Boxing club lightweight; Izzy Goldstein and Pete Misiag, featherweights; Tony Settipane, Northwest gymnasium bantamweight, and Jess Robinson, C. Y. O. flyweight. Robinson holds A Century of Progress championship.

Johnny Phagan and Solly Dukelsky have signed to meet at Marigold Gardens on Feb 5. . . . The show scheduled at Arcadia Gardens Wednesday has been canceled. . . . Harry Dublinsky and Eddie [Kid] Wolfe meet at New Orleans, La., Jan. 29. . . . An amateur card will be offered at St. Alphonsus gymnasium Friday. . . . Harry Gordon, former bantamweight, will leave San Francisco, Cal., Wednesday accompanied by boxers Ralph Lenny, Speedy Dado, Star Frisco, Wesley Ramey, Roy Williams, Joe Ghnouly, Varias Milling, and Marty Sampson for a series of contests in Australia.

Two wrestling bouts, two boxing matches at five rounds each and eight tournament boxing contests will be offered tomorrow at the Savoy arena. Ralph Collier and Marty Cherkowsky are matched for five rounds, as are Earl Watson and Art Cherkowsky. Lightweight, welterweight, and flyweight boxers will compete in tournament bouts, eventual winners of which will be entered in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S Golden Gloves tournament which opens at the 132d regiment armory Feb. 12, 13, and 14. ZOO GROUNDHOGS ARE NO GOOD AS WEATHER SEERS

They Don't Even Hibernate During Winter.

BY BOB BECKER.

If the amateur weather prophets in Chicagoland still believe in that story about the groundhog and his shadow forecasting the kind of weather we may get during the early spring, they had better stay away from the groundhogs in the Lincoln park zoo.

Whereas our wild woodchucks [or groundhogs] are supposed to go to sleep in the winter and come out only on a certain day next month to give us a hint on future weather, the Lincoln park zoo animals of this species are up and around these days as if it were any season but midwinter. In fact, the other day when we made another visit to Lincoln park to renew our acquaintance with some of the animals on exhibition we found the groundhogs violating the new code for A-1 hibernators. They not only were up and around [instead of sleeping away the winter hours], but they also were eating.

They're Out of Sight.

It's unfortunate that visitors to the zoo at this time of year cannot see the groundhogs and many other small mammals. They are temporarily taken out of circulation. "Going into winter quarters" is what the zoo officials call it. During the summer these animals are kept in outside cages. Apparently there is no open exhibition space for them during the winter, so the woodchucks, the skunks, badgers, and a few other specials of small mammals take a "rest cure" away from crowds during the winter months.

If you have an extra swimming tank in your back yard, something with bars on it, Floyd S. Young, director of the Lincoln park zoo, wouldn't mind having it for the seals. The poor seals haven't any inside swimming pool. Therefore these swell showmen, who are very expert divers, swimmers, and catchers of fish "on the wing" have to retire during the cold months.

Seals Are Missing.

We were wondering where the seals were being kept when we went through the Lincoln park zoo a few days ago with William Auer, the foreman. After we had inspected the small animal house containing the woodchucks and other small species, and after Auer had taken us into the basement to look at the stocks of bread, fresh beef, and similar items which are in the animal commissary department, he led us into another building. Outside we could see a zebra, looking rather foreign to Chicago's winter weather. On the other side of this low building were numerous deer.

When Mr. Auer ushered us into this building the mystetry of where the seals are being housed was cleared up. Because the zoo lacks a winter exhibition pool for them they are now confined to small quarters, out of sight of all visitors.

They Miss Their Public.

They have a small pool of water, but it's no roomy swimming hole like they should have. When we looked over the partition at the seals sitting at the edge of their small pool the animals appeared to be quite downcast because they were being deprived of their admiring public.

De Paul Out for No. 6 Tonight in Valparaiso Game

De Paul university's basketball team, determined to extend its winning streak to six straight games, tonight will meet Valparaiso university at the De Paul gymnasium.

The Blue Demons have beaten North Central, Nebraska, Minnesota, Arizona, and Armour Tech.

Coach Jim Kelly is expected to start the same lineup tonight that routed Armour Thursday. There will be one exception, however, Francis Linskey, shifted to forward in that game, will resume his guard position. Either Phil Krause or Ray Adams will be paired with him.

El Weston will start at center, and Pete Barskis will be returned to forward. Jim Gorsky will appear at the other forward.

Making 32 points in the last two games Barskis has gained the scoring lead. He is two points ahead of Linskey with a total of 43. Gorsky, who headed the scoring column last season, ranks third with 35 points. Behind him is Weston with 25.

Baby Ruths' Rally Defeats Detroit, 4-3

The Baby Ruths, leading Chicago amateur hockey team, scored a 4 to 3 victory over the Detroit White Stars at the Coliseum yesterday afternoon.

The Detroit team, which heads the Michigan-Ontario Amateur league, was out in front, 2 to 0, at the start of the third period. The Baby Ruths, however, put on a concerted drive at this point, which resulted in a 2 to 2 tie in less than two minutes of play. With four forwards taking their places on the Red Shirts' line, Wiljanen made the first tally on a pass from Deacon in 28 seconds. Samec banged in the tying point with Deacon again figuring in the passing, along with Saxburg. The time was 1:27.

Detroit recaptured the lead seconds later when Hunt scored on a pass from E. Bingham. A powerful drive by the Chicagoans, however, resulted in Manderfield evening the score at 3 all on Wiljanen's pass, at 13:24. Two minutes later Chick Deacon's goal gave the Baby Ruths the game. He sailed through the entire Detroit team to pop one in unassisted in 15:51.

A. Bingham, Detroit's center, was responsible for the first two scores. He netted the first point in 1:48 of the opening period and the second in 15:22 of the second. Lineup:

Chicago to See Tilden and Vines Meet Saturday

Big Bill Tilden, who has won two out of three matches with Ellsworth Vines, latest of the amateurs to join the pro ranks, will meet the youthful Californian at the Broadway armory Saturday night.

Tilden and Vines, with Vincent Richards and Bruce Barnes, are staging a series of matches in the larger cities of the east and central west. The tour concludes next month.

In their opening match in Madison Square Garden last week, Tilden won from Vines in straight sets. A few nights later in Philadelphia Vines made a stronger showing, winning one set, and Saturday night he beat Big Bill, three sets to one.

Preparations for a capacity crowd are being made at the armory, which has been rebuilt during the winter. The huge enclosure now contains the largest wood floor in the country. Four tennis courts have been laid out and are open to the public. It is on one of these courts that Tilden and his troupe will perform.

Additional seats have been installed, bringing capacity to 4,000.

OTTSEN DEFEATS CHICAGOANS IN ST. LOUIS SKATE

St. Louis, Mo., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Lamar Ottsen, Missouri skating champion, retained his title here today and also won the silver skates tournament, annual St. Louis ice event.

In competition with some of the outstanding skating of the central west, including Eddie Schroeder and Eddie Stundl of Chicago, Ottsen rolled up a commanding lead by capturing the one-sixth mile, one-half mile, and one mile open events.

Stundl finished second in the half-mile. In the mile event, with Stundl and Schroeder in contending positions on the final lap, Schroeder fell, carrying Stundl with him out of the contest. Ottsen won only after he withstood a challenge in the last few yards by Bob Peterson, Milwaukee youth, who came from behind to finish second.

In the two mile event Stundl and Schroeder finished in a dead heat for first place. Ottsen was third. Leo Freisinger of Chicago was an outstanding star in the intermediate events, beating Ottsen's time in the half mile and miles.

Connie Mack Sees Tigers as Pennant Threat This Year

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 14.—(AP)—Connie Mack, preparing to leave for the south, said today he wouldn't be a bit surprised to see his former ace catcher, Mickey Cochrane, pilot the Detroit Tigers to the American league pennant this coming season.

"Detroit has a good chance to win the pennant," he conceded. "In fact I wouldn't be a bit surprised if they won it.

"The club has a wonderful pitching staff and has added to its hitting strength with Cochrane and Goslin. Even without their addition, Detroit ought to be better next season."

However, the veteran pilot of the Athletics, who will leave for Florida tomorrow, looks to his own club to have something to say in the campaign, which he believes will be closer this year than for many seasons past.

"The many trades since the close of last season are bound to tighten the race," he said. "Since 1920 the A.'s, New York, and Washington have dominated the league, but it's going to be different next season, with real opposition coming from the west and the Boston Red Sox."

ALF ENGEN WINS PRO SKI MEET HALTED BY SNOW

Winsted, Conn., Jan. 14.—(AP)—On a snow-banked mountainside called the longest hill in the world, the first professional ski meet of the Winsted Ski club was held today, with Alf Engen of Salt Lake City winning first money.

The meet started under ideal conditions, with 10,000 persons grouped in cars at the foot of the incline, but flakes were in the air at the halfway mark, and the competition was halted when three-quarters over by heavy snowfall.

Engen alone of the 11 men competitors started from the top of the hill in Colebrook river, four miles from Winsted. His first jump carried him 192 feet, and his second 163 for a total of 355 feet.

The only woman competitor, Miss Johanna Koistad of Oslo, Norway, made a single exhibition jump, which was not measured, to carry off the woman's prize.

Second place went to Strand Mikkelsen of Greenfield, Mass., with a total of 310 feet for his two jumps. Lekang was third with a two-jump total of 289. The winner's brother, Sverre Engen of Salt Lake City, was fourth with 286 feet. The other totals were: Clarence Olsen of Berlin, N. H., 278; Harold Johanssen of Brooklyn, 271; Billy Robes of Hanover, N. H., 252; Jacques Trottier of St. Helene, Quebec, 249; Carl Herstad, 224; James Faille of Brooklyn, 202, and John Tessmer of Detroit, 194.

COMMISSION TO HEAR SAVOLDI'S PROPOSAL TODAY

Joe Savoldi's plans to sign two contracts with the Chicago Stadium to have his suspension lifted will be aired before the Illinois Athletic commission this afternoon.

The former Notre Dame football player who pinned Jim Londos is ready to meet Londos in a return match, provided he is permitted to compete on the Stadium card Jan. 31 against some one else.

The Stadium has Savoldi signed to wrestle either Gus Sonnenberg, Joe Stetcher, or Don George and Joe Foley, representing the Stadium's wrestling department, has requested a permit from the athletic board to hold the match Jan. 31. Foley also has Savoldi's signed contract to meet Londos some time in February.

Savoldi, who has been under suspension here since last April, following his refusal to tackle Londos in a return match a few weeks after his victory over the Greek.

GRANGE'S LONG RUNS DEFEAT ALL-STARS, 26-7

ed the half at Saunders' position after Hammack had recovered Battles' fumble on the All-Star's 29-yard line. Atkinson got off two threatening passes, one for 31 yards to Apsit and another for 15, bringing the ball to the Bears' 26 yard line. The threat ended when Grange intercepted a pass at the gun.

Grange intercepted one of Griffiths' passes on his own 27-yard line to end one Los Angeles march in the third quarter and cut another All-Star effort short by intercepting Saunders' toss on his own 40-yard line in the same quarter. When he finally trotted off the field the stands rose to a man to cheer him.

Bears Stop Attack.

Unable to gain in the fourth period, Los Angeles punted to the Bears' 43 yard line, and after one play, Battles forward passed to Ronzani on a play that started out as a buck. The pass was good for 30 yards, and Ronzani loped ahead of two coast players the remaining 27 yards to a touchdown. Manders' placement kick for extra point hit the crossbar.

Pinckert's team ran and passed to the Bears' 16 yard line in the remaining time, but was held after Saunders and Musik ripped off 43 yards on eight plays. Saunders later intercepted Doehring's pass on the Bears' 30 yard line, only to have Hewitt down him for four yard loss on the first play and Zeller intercept his pass on the next.

The Bears play another coast team at San Francisco next week, and then return here for a game. Today's contest was promoted by the American Legion. The Los Angeles county fund for disabled veterans of the world war shared in the receipts.

KILLED BY AUTO AS BROTHER DIES OF HEART ATTACK

Woman Seized as Driver of Death Car.

Two brothers died 15 minutes apart last night—one of heart disease, the other under the wheels of a hit and run car. Three men and two women were seized by police for the motor killing. The brothers in the double tragedy were William D. Carroll, 62 years old, 1461 West 73d place, a former street car motorman, and Miles Carroll, 46, janitor at the K A M Jewish temple, 4959 Drexel boulevard, where he also lived.

William Carroll died suddenly in his home at 7:40 o'clock last night. Fifteen minutes later his brother, Miles, who was unaware of his death, was struck and killed in front of the temple by an automobile containing two men and two women. The automobile sped away.

Trace Hit and Run Car.

Witnesses gave Hyde Park police the license number of the automobile and it was traced to John Meagher, 40 years old, 5005 Drexel boulevard. Sergt. James P. McLaughlin and a squad found the car, its front damaged, and then entered Meagher's home. There they arrested his wife, Mrs. Anna Meagher, 38 years old; Mrs. Barbara Karalus, 30; James Anderson, 28, of 2552 Ardmore avenue, and Walter Wagner, 32, 5834 North Artesian avenue.

Police said that Mrs. Meagher drove the car and that Mrs. Karalus, Anderson, and Wagner were passengers. All but Wagner had been drinking, police said. The two women and Anderson denied being in the car. Wagner insisted they were, however, and admitted being in it also. He named Mrs. Meagher as the driver. Mrs. Meagher, her husband, Mrs. Karalus, Anderson, and Wagner were ordered held for the inquest today.

Girl Killed in Crash.

Miss Charlotte Nielsen, 19 years old, 225 15th street, Wilmette, was killed, and her father, Waldemar Nielsen, 53, a civil engineer, was seriously injured yesterday when their automobile was crushed by a Civilian Conservation corps truck at Dempster street and Crawford avenue in Niles Center.

Police said that Nielsen turned his car south in Crawford avenue from Dempster street and squarely into the path of the truck, which was eastbound. The heavy truck smashed the Nielsen car. Twelve CCC workers on the truck escaped injury. Nielsen was taken to St. Francis' hospital, Evanston, suffering from a spine fracture.

Three Other Deaths.

The deaths of Carroll and Miss Nielsen and three others raised the county toll since Jan. 1 to 59. The three other victims:

Herman Hansen, 55 years old, who lived at the relief shelter at 116 South Green street. Died at the county hospital of injuries received Saturday night at Ogden and Racine avenues, supposedly when struck by a hit-and-run driver.

William Kaplan, 74 years old, 1817 South St. Louis avenue. Died at the Mount Sinai hospital of injuries sustained Dec. 30 when he was hit by a car while crossing Roosevelt road at Troy street. The driver was Louis Kantor, 3809 West 13th street.

Louis Pascerelli, 51 years old, 3044 Arthington street. Died at the Washington Boulevard hospital of injuries received when he was struck by a car driven by Morris Slipkin, 4907 North Whipple street, Saturday night.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE: "Daddy" Will Hear of This

REVEALS SEAWAY LOBBY SENT OUT FAKE RAIL VIEWS

Old Statements Are Dug Up.

The Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater association was accused yesterday of deliberately misrepresenting the attitude of western railway executives regarding the Canadian seaway treaty, on which the association has spent $500,000 in spreading propaganda. The accusation was contained in a letter sent by M. J. Gormley, president of the American Railway association, to J. P. Haynes, executive vice president of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Mr. Gormley stated that the Tidewater association had dug up interviews made by the railway men as long as 14 years ago and published them in a bulletin issued in March, 1933, in a deliberate attempt to represent the executives as favoring the seaway project.

Thom Testimony Ignored.

The bulletin was issued four months after Alfred P. Thom, then general counsel for the Association of Railway Executives, had testified before the senate foreign relations committee that western railway officials were unanimous in their opposition to the seaway.

Mr. Gormley's letter contained excerpts from Thom's testimony showing that the witness had stated he was authorized to speak for all class 1 railroads in presenting their conclusion that regardless of what had been their views in the past the executives now considered their opposition to the treaty a sound position.

Interviews Misstate Views.

"The Tidewater association's bulletin shows on its face that those who issued it were, at the time of its publication, aware of the position of the railroad executives in the northwest as stated by Mr. Thom," stated Mr. Gormley's letter, "and yet produced old interviews of a number of years ago which was shown to no longer represent their considered opinion."

PARIS, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Gen. Jean Baptiste Marchand, principal French figure in the Fashoda incident, which brought France and England to the verge of war in 1898, died at his home today at the age of 70.

Gen. Marchand, after being summoned to do so by Lord Kitchener, refused to evacuate the Fashoda fort, in the upper Nile region, which the French had constructed during the British Dervish hostilities. The fort eventually was evacuated after diplomatic negotiations. On his return to France Gen. Marchand was received as a national hero.

He resigned from the army in 1904 and entered politics, in which he was not very successful. In 1914 he returned to the army as colonel of a brigade, distinguishing himself at the battle of Argonne. Dangerously wounded at Argonne, he returned to the front and played a part at Verdun and the second battle of the Marne.

BLAME POLITICS FOR TAVERN AND CLUB SHOOTINGS

Ward politics yesterday was blamed for the shootings which occurred Saturday night at the Lawrence C. O'Brien Booster club, 918 North Wells street, and at Sherry's tavern, 951 North Wells street. A roving car of gunmen fired a dozen slugs through the window at the tavern, and three bullets pierced the door and front at the O'Brien club. East Chicago avenue police said no report of either shooting had been made.

The shooting at the tavern threw 50 patrons into panic. Frank McGuire and his wife, Catherine, patrons of the place, had just seated themselves in a booth when the shooting started. As McGuire started to take his hat off a bullet ripped it out of his hand. His wife and a dozen other women fainted.

Sherry is a 42d ward precinct captain and a close friend of O'Brien, former state representative. The double shootings recalled the order issued by Police Commissioner Allman on Saturday transferring Capt. Charles G. McGurn from the East Chicago avenue district to Cragin district.

SEIZE TRUCKMEN AND STEAL $7,500 LOAD OF TIRES

A gang of six gunmen early yesterday slugged and kidnaped two truckmen and stole their load of nine and a half tons of tires valued at $7,500. The truck driver, Walter Brunn, and his helper, Robert Ross, both of Akron, O., were taking the tires to Minneapolis from the Akron Motor Cartage company plant at Akron. They had stopped their truck at the bottom of a hill on Route 28, eight miles north of Elgin, to spread sand on the slippery incline, when the gunmen drove up in two automobiles.

Brunn was slugged with a pistol butt and, with his helper, was blindfolded and gagged with adhesive tape. They were then thrown into the rear seat of one of the cars and driven to a house where they were held for eight hours. After being given their breakfast they were taken back to the holdup scene. They found their empty truck a mile away. Sergt. John Healy of the Willow Springs county highway police said the federal government would be asked to investigate the crime since the theft was of an interstate shipment.

RITES TOMORROW FOR H. P. HARNED, AGED ARCHITECT

Mr. Harned was born in Philadelphia, and came to Chicago in 1871. The destruction caused by the great fire in the previous year provided considerable new business for him, and he designed many structures in the loop and outlying districts in subsequent years. Among the structures he created are the Lyon & Healy building and the Farwell building. He also built many estates.

Illness forced Mr. Harned's retirement from active business in 1907. His only survivor is his son.

GRAINS HIGHER; WORLD OUTLOOK FOR WHEAT POOR

U. S. Crop Condition Unusually Low.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

With a prospective heavy reduction in the stock of old wheat on hand at the end of the 1933-'34 season, the outlook for the new winter grain crop becomes of paramount importance.

According to returns from various parts of the northern hemisphere, which, with the exception of India, Argentina and Australia, harvests the bulk of the world's wheat crop, present prospects are poorer than last year. The United States has the second lowest condition on record, and with a reduced acreage the prospect for an average crop is regarded as doubtful. Canada is expected to lower its acreage 15 per cent.

European Acreage Down.

The European acreage generally is regarded as showing a moderate reduction from that of 1933. Unfavorable weather conditions have resulted in complaints of damage being received the last few weeks from a considerable area. Little is known regarding the Russian acreage, as official estimates on the crop have not been issued for several years.

An official report on farm reserves of wheat in the United States as of Jan. 1 shows that the leading states east of the Rockies, which raise the surplus grain, had total holdings of 147 million bushels, or 77 million bushels less than for the same period a year ago.

From this will have to be deducted the amount needed for spring wheat seed and for other purposes, so that mills cannot count on much over 100 million bushels of country run wheat between now and the end of the current season.

See Drop in Visible Supply.

The visible supply is expected to show a marked reduction in today's statement, with some operators looking for it to fall below 120 million bushels, which will be the lowest level since last June.

Sentiment has been gradually changing of late, and at the close of the week there was a general belief that the market might work irregularly higher. However, there are a number of observers who feel the incentive for the bull movement, if there is to be one, will come from the unfavorable outlook for the new crop.

Wheat sold at the highest level since Dec. 12 during the last week, and closed with net gains of 3 to 3¼ cents, with May finishing Saturday at 87⅝ to 87⅞ cents; July, 85⅞ to 86 cents, and September at 87 cents. Range of prices follows:

Monday	84 -85	82⅝-83⅛	83⅞-84⅛
Tuesday	84⅝-85½	83⅛-84	84⅛-85⅛

Corn Has Narrow Range.

Corn prices held within narrow limits, the market running into selling on advances and receiving fair support on the breaks. It is estimated that over 125 million bushels of corn on farms has now been pledged for government loans at 45 cents per bushel.

At the close on Saturday net gains were recorded of 1 to 1¼ cents for the week, with May 52⅝ to 52¾ cents; July, 54¼ to 54⅜ cents, and September, 55½ cents. Range of prices follows:

Oats Reserves at Record Low.

Farm reserves of oats on Jan. 1 of 450 million bushels were the smallest known since the government started to compile holdings at this period of the year. Even with reduced consumption the balance of the season the trade expects there will be relatively little grain on hand at the end of the crop year.

Net gains on oats for the week were 1¼ to 1⅝ cents, with May closing at 38½ cents on Saturday, July, 36⅜ cents, and September, 35⅝ cents. Range of prices follows:

Unique Metal Aids Chicago Area Industry

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

How American industry is constantly turning to the development of new products, providing fresh avenues for increasing wealth and employment, is shown in the working of the metal tantalum by the Fansteel Products company, Inc., at North Chicago. And at the same time the activities connected with the tantalum industry once more illustrate the growing interdependence of the nations of the world with respect to sources of raw materials and outlets for finished products.

Tantalum, while not a new metal, has found its way into use by industry and commerce comparatively recently. It is produced on a commercial scale only in North Chicago, although it is made in Germany. The ore from which it is made comes from west Australia. Its chief market at the moment lies in Europe, although its use is constantly increasing in this country.

New Metal Discovered in 1802.

Tantalum was first noted as an element by A. G. Ekeberg in 1802. He gave the metal its name because he could not succeed in separating it from its tightly locked compounds.

Described as an "everlasting metal," tantalum is at present largely used by the electrical and chemical industries. Alloyed with carbide, tantalum is used to produce one of the hardest cutting materials known. It will cut hard steels which previously were considered unmachinable. It will cut ordinary steels at from four to eight times the speed of other materials, it is stated, and its life is considerably longer than older materials.

Its makers describe the metal as "proof against almost every kind of corrosive reagent, available in all commercial forms, variable in hardness from a leadlike softness to a steely toughness and elasticity or a flinty surface hardness which will actually cut glass." Its chief value in the chemical industry rests in its ability to prevent corrosion or contamination of equipment, it is stated.

Produced on Commercial Scale.

Dr. C. W. Balke, head of the Fansteel company's research staff, became interested in tantalum in 1908. He spent considerable time in research, endeavoring to find a way to produce it on a commercial scale. After many failures, his efforts were successful. The metal was put on a commercial basis at the North Chicago plant in 1922. Since then its use has been steadily expanding. Its production in Germany is reported as continuing to be expensive.

In their efforts to find sources of tantalite ore, agents of the Chicago company combed the world. It was finally found in a sufficient quantity in the desolate Pilbarra district of western Australia, 450 miles from the nearest railroad. There are said to be other deposits in the world, but not sufficiently rich in tantalum to make refinement commercially feasible under present methods.

The ore is brought to Chicago by steamer and train in 100 pound bags from the fields in Australia. While the present tonnage is not considerable, it was stated that its movement provides a good piece of business for the railroads.

Tantalum sells currently at a rate of about $100 a kilogram, or 2.2 pounds. Europe continues to be the best market for it, but this country is adopting it in increasing amounts. J. M. Troxel, president of the Fansteel company, states that there has been an increase each year.

Specifically, tantalum is used for all sorts of containers in the chemical industry and for instruments which might be impaired by corrosion. It is used in the radio and wireless industry in the manufacture of rectifiers, condensers, and electronic tube elements.

The metal is described as a beautiful material, similar in color to silver. Mr. Troxel says that it can be highly colored through an electrolytic process. Its high cost, however, makes its use in the arts prohibitive at the present time.

Cotton Consumption in December Below 1932

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14. — (AP) — Cotton consumed during December was reported today by the census bureau to have totaled 348,393 bales of lint and 51,624 of linters, compared with 475,368 lint and 59,111 of linters during November and 440,439 of lint and 48,068 of linters in December, 1932.

STEEL ACTIVITY EASES DESPITE GAIN IN AWARDS

Production Sags to 30% of Capacity.

While last week was marked by an expansion in structural steel awards and by emergence of more business from the carriers, steelworks operations edged off one point to 30 per cent of capacity, reports the magazine Steel, which adds that a reversal in the trend of production is anticipated.

Operations in two of the main producing districts rose last week, in five declined, and in three held steady. The rate gained 6 points to 62 per cent in the Wheeling district and 3 to 54 at Cleveland.

It fell 2 to 32 in Chicago, 1 to 21 at Pittsburgh, 1 to 21½ in eastern Pennsylvania, 6 to 26 at Youngstown, and 7 to 88 in New England. Production continued at 79 in Detroit, 52 in Birmingham, and 29 in Buffalo.

Rail Prospects Bright.

While the automotive industry is slowly solving the mechanical problems which have impeded its production so far, prospects of orders from the railroads are multiplying. Santa Fe will soon buy 10,000 tons of fastenings, Bangor and Aroostook 1,200 tons of fastenings, and St. Louis and San Francisco 26,000 tons of rails. The Santa Fe has bought 33,000 tons of rails, the Missouri Pacific 25,000 tons.

Some car lists financed by the PWA are held up by the delay in approval of the carbuilders' code. The Pennsylvania will soon take bids for heavy requirements, including 75,000 tons for 6,500 freight cars, in its equipment program. Awards will probably be made early in February.

Structural steel awards for the week rose to 28,252 tons. The largest order for reinforcing bars in many weeks, amounting to 3,500 tons, was placed for a spillway bridge at Bonnet Carre.

Farm Buying Power Aids.

"New orders booked by some leading steel interests so far this month are ahead of the tonnage placed in the comparable period in December," remarks Steel. "One of the brightest features of the industrial picture, expected to be translated into orders for steel and steel products shortly, is the evident increase in purchasing power in agricultural areas."

The magazine reports that American producers expect to get orders for 25,000 tons of cast iron pipe for Mexico City and 9,000 tons for Vera Cruz. Russia may buy steel heavily in the near future, according to certain officials at Washington, who estimate requirements for its railroad program at 7,000,000 tons for cars and locomotives, and 3,270,000 tons of rails.

LARGE EUROPEAN CROP OFFSETS REDUCTION IN WHEAT ACREAGE

While drastic curtailment in wheat production occurred in the United States and Canada in 1933, and the Australian harvest was also much smaller than the preceding year, the European crop, exclusive of Russia, was the largest on record and to some extent accounts for the unusually small imports during the first six months of the current season.

	Crop
	United States	Canada	Argentina	Australia	Europe	*World	Carryover
1933-'34	527	282	256	180	1,668	3,587	782

*Includes Russian exports, if any.

The carryover at the end of the 1932-'33 crop year established a new all time record. Trade estimates are that the total at the end of the 1933-'34 season will show a reduction of around 200,000,000 bushels in the total carryover as compared with the preceding year. The 10 year average world's wheat crop has been 3,713,000,000 bushels, while the average disappearance during the same period, including Russian exports, has been 3,597,000,000 bushels.

HESITANT TREND RULES DOMESTIC METAL MARKETS

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Poor domestic consuming demand for copper was reflected by a ¼ cent decline to 8 cents per pound for electrolytic this week. Recent easiness of lead and zinc had a sympathetic influence, as well as a decline in export copper prices.

Foreign buyers had previously been purchasing sufficient metal to aid in sustaining the domestic price basis. Hesitancy here was attributed partly to conflicting views of various producing divisions over provisions in proposed copper codes.

Zinc experienced a further moderate decline owing to unsettlement in the ore situation. In a reported effort to obtain mine curtailment as a result of recent active operations and increasing stocks, ore prices were reduced sharply last week.

Lead ruled with a moderately active demand for January and February requirements reported from various consuming branches. With smelters said to be able to move their present ore intake on the business received there was little or no pressure to sell. Tin remained quiet and about steady here despite activity and strength of London. Interest was centered on reports from abroad of plans for formation of a "buffer" pool to acquire 5 per cent of the 1929 standard production.

CWA WORK PROGRAM AIDS CHICAGO TRADE, SURVEY INDICATES

Final assignment of the full quota of emergency workers on Chicago's CWA projects gave an added boost to local trade last week, according to observers of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Consumer outlets, particularly in outlying sections of the city, report better business. Collections are said to have improved and rents are being met more promptly. The reemployment program is also said to be causing a brisker demand for apartments.

In the wholesale field there is a satisfactory demand for spring goods. Clothing, silks, and fabrics are all being bought freely.

The same conditions appear to prevail in the furniture field. Local manufacturers and distributors are being forced to back-order many commitments.

Chicago automobile distributors, as well as those in the tire and allied fields, are also reporting good business.

Favorable Dividends Down; Adverse Changes Increase

New York, Jan. 14.—Favorable dividend changes in the past week totaled 39, against 64 in the previous week, reports Standard Statistics company. There were 16 resumptions, five increases, ten extras and eight initial payments. Nineteen unfavorable revisions were announced, nine more than in the preceding week; ten payments were cut and nine passed.

Opposition to Bank Plan Seen Growing

New York, Jan. 14.—From the discussions that took place at annual meetings of banks last week Wall street observers think it is apparent that congress will face in the next few months a widespread demand, led by thonsands of holders of bank stocks, for modification of the federal deposit insurance plan so as to maintain in force the present guarantee of small deposits but abandon the permanent deposit insurance plan.

The sentiment of bank stockholders, as disclosed at their meetings, is favorable to the temporary plan now in effect, but strongly opposed to the permanent plan. It was clear from the statements made at these meetings that unless congress decides to alter the permanent plan before July 1 next, when it is scheduled to supplant the present arrangement, there will be a fight against it that may lead to the withdrawal from the federal reserve system of a number of important banks.

Hope for Modification.

Responses made by bank executives to their stockholders, however, indicate that the bankers themselves have strong hopes that the permanent plan will be modified or suspended. Bankers who have been studying the implications of the whole deposit insurance program have become convinced that the objectives congress had in view are achieved by the temporary form of insurance and that the installation of the permanent plan would add nothing to the protection of small depositors and might even weaken this protection. They have reason to believe, they say, that this view has received sympathy in official Washington circles.

The temporary plan, which insures bank deposits up to a limit of $2,500, completely insures the mass of small bank depositors. The effect has been beneficial, the bankers agree. It has allayed public concern about the safety of bank deposits.

Sees Purposes Achieved.

These two results, protection of small depositors and restoration of confidence in the banks, achieve the fundamental purposes of the deposit insurance plan, they say.

Under the permanent plan, however, insurance would be extended to cover larger deposits in full or in part. This would give additional partial protection to large corporations, individuals and firms, but would tend to weaken the coverage of small accounts by greatly increasing the total risk.

Although the permanent plan insures virtually all depositors, it only covers about one-third of all deposits. By seeking to cover partially the very large deposits the permanent plan would greatly increase the liabilities of the insurance plan. Most bankers believe that these large depositors are well able to protect themselves and ought not to be accorded coverage which might be at the expense of the smaller depositors.

VETERANS LOOK FOR MAJOR MOVE IN STOCK MART

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 14.—Stocks remain in the trading range they have occupied for the last two months or so, but veteran observers think they see signs that a major move of some kind is in the making. Opinion as to which way the swing may head is sharply divided.

One school of prognosticators thinks conditions are ripe for a premature spring advance in anticipation of further business expansion and fresh stimulus from the outworking of the administration's recovery program. Another believes—reasoning on the chart of past performances—that a shakeout is technically in order before the market can hope to pull itself out of the present stalemate for any sustained endeavor on the upside.

Favorable Trade News.

The market enjoys at the moment a favorable background of trade news—including a pickup in railroad traffic on the week, maintenance of a higher rate of operations in the steel industry than had been expected, some good looking figures on power output and a surprisingly good advance sale of motor cars for the current month.

Moreover, as chart devotees point out, the range of trading has been growing narrower and narrower for weeks, with the bottoms bumped on each little reaction moving higher and higher, a phenomenon which would seem to indicate that the path of least resistance is toward loftier levels. Many brokers believe that a really worthwhile news development of bullish flavor is all that is needed to set in motion that spring advance which Wall street has come to regard as inevitable no matter what the state of affairs nationally.

The breadth of dealings in the face of thinness in trading lately has seemed to point to considerable accumulation in anticipation of such a move. The market is conspicuously lacking in the leadership necessary for a bull campaign, however, and brokers are at a loss to say just what group might be counted upon to get the play when the anticipated improvement does get under way.

Utilities Do Well.

Utilities have been making about the best group showing of any here of late, due in a measure to the kind things said in behalf of this industry by the President in a recent press interview. Trading in some of the lower priced issues of the section was particularly active on two or three days of the last week.

The rails have been putting up a good front also, and many believe they that has come to be counted on by many firms and families

IT IS a policy of The Northern Trust Company to keep its service simple and direct. For its customers it tries to do all that a conservative financial institution can do —all that is consistent with sound banking.

Many firms and families have come to count upon this established concept of service.

Some of these customers use many of the departments of The Northern Trust Company. They include responsible business heads who find this bank co-operates closely and directly in matters of commercial banking. They include men and women who carry here their personal checking accounts, as well as heads of families who look to this company to carry their plans for their estates down through the years.

And there are many families who have entrusted their savings to the bank.

The Northern Trust Company feels that all of these customers desire to find here the same character. A conservatism, an unchanging idea of banking and trust relationships, an earnest effort to serve are common to all departments.

Those to whom such ideas seem practical are invited to use the facilities of the institution. There are five departments: Banking for commercial and personal checking accounts, Trust, Savings, Bond and Safe Deposit.

U. S. BONDS REACT BUT LATER LEAD GENERAL RALLY

Activity Is Dominated by Washington News.

New York, Jan. 14.—(AP)—A slump and later recovery of United States government securities, together with a substantial rally of corporation issues, featured an unusually active bond market last week.

The prospective borrowing of $10,000,000,000 by the government during the next six months, coupled with a probability that the national debt will approximate $35,000,000,000 by 1936, unsettled the federal section. There was hurried switching of long for short term issues in addition to some nervous selling.

Several treasuries broke to new 1933-'34 lows before support appeared. The rally started Thursday when bids arrived from numerous "bargain hunters." At the same time treasury purchases for sinking fund and other accounts were rumored along with institutional investment.

Washington Rumors Aid.

The upturn in federals, as well as in the corporation groups, was attributed partly to reports that the administration was considering imminent revaluation of the dollar in terms of gold. Along with these reports advices from Washington stated that Attorney General Cummings had submitted an opinion to the President regarding the ways and means of impounding some $3,600,000,000 of gold now held by the federal reserve system.

Bond circles generally were inclined to accept these happenings as indications that the administration was preparing to make some new move regarding its monetary policy. There was a renewal of buying from abroad in the corporation groups on the theory, dealers said, that dollar stabilization was near.

Foreign observers, it was added, believed the American monetary unit might be revalued at its present theoretical gold price of around 60 cents with the President retaining his power to further reduce the value to 59 cents if he found it desirable.

Rails, Utilities Gain.

Rails and utilities were also spurred by news that President Roosevelt believed sinking funds for bonded debts should be provided and that regulatory bodies should consider this in rate making. The utilities, which had been drooping for months, came back buoyantly. Best gains, however, were scored by the carriers which had additional aid from improving business.

The President's message to congress recommending legislation for the guarantee of both interest and principal on $2,000,000,000 of farm credit administration bonds was one of the highlights of the week. A similar recommendation on $2,000,000,000 of home loan bonds is expected soon.

Most foreign obligations exhibited strength. The Germans were the most active gainers, although they dipped later in the week. Substantial advances were registered by bonds of Brazil, Finland, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Copenhagen and Norway. Issues of the gold standard countries did little as their currencies were rather narrow in foreign exchange dealings.

CONGRESS EYED BY INVESTMENT TRUST OFFICERS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan.14.—While officials of investment trusts are pondering their status under the banking act of 1933, which they feel was not originally intended to cover them, they are also considering the likelihood of specific legislation designed to regulate the operation of their business. Although there has been as yet no inkling of any specific action planned in congress, trust operators feel that such action is so much in the temper of the times that it is to be considered if not actually anticipated.

Among the subjects which it is believed may come under consideration with respect to the trusts is that of completely divorcing the business from all over other forms of financial enterprise. This would involve, it is believed, the elimination from trust boards of all representatives of other types of finance, including not only commercial bankers, but investment bankers, brokers and officials of large corporations.

The object of such legislation, if it were adopted would be to remove any possibility of the trust being influenced in managing its portfolio by the creators, underwriters, distributors or dealers in securities, according to those in the trust business who have been considering the subject.

Committee Extends Time on Arizona Power Co. Plan

An extension of time for deposit of Arizona Power company securities under the readjustment plan has been announced by the protective committee, which states that a substantial portion of the outstanding securities have already been deposited. No definite time limit was fixed, but the committee reserves the right to determine when sufficient securities have been deposited for them to proceed to make the plan effective.

VETERANS LOOK FOR MAJOR MOVE IN STOCK MARKET

But Unable to Say What Direction It Will Take.

will be found out in front in any advance that may be in order. Alcohol stocks are having their ups and downs at the moment, bracing up on "good" market days and capitulating to profit taking with the first sign of a turn. The growing clamor against the poor liquor with which distilleries have flooded the country and the exhorbitant prices being charged for the stuff is not doing the liquor shares any good from all accounts.

Oils Have Trouble.

The oils have had a little trouble on account of a gasoline price war here in the east and the motors bobbed up with the motor show and down as it came to a close.

Tobacco issues were given a whirl early in the week on the boost in cigaret prices, but fell back later on profittaking. The list as a whole finished fractionally higher.

Trading continues to be an affair of the professionals, turnover for the week amounting to only about 7,045,000 shares.

GERMANY PUTS RESTRICTIONS ON FRENCH TRADE

(Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.)

BERLIN, Jan. 14.—The threatened trade war between France and Germany became a reality when the German government set up by decree quotas for imports from France. These were established in retaliation against the reduction of the French quotas, which, according to German figures, will reduce Germany's exports to France by 600,000,000 francs a year.

The German quotas affect French wines, textiles, perfumes, rubber and leather goods, woodwork and textile machines. They will remain in force until April 1.

In most cases the quotas reduce French exports to Germany to approximately one-half of their total during the first quarter of last year, although in a few cases they are even above the actual exports during that period.

Central Indiana Power.

Investors' Guide: Please give me all the information you can about Central Indiana Power. I am inclosing stamp for reply.—K. W. L.

Answer: Central Indiana Power company is a holding company controlled by Midland United company. In 1932 the company merged various subsidiaries. As a result it has only one operating subsidiary, Northern Indiana Power company, and a 36.49 per cent common stock interest in Public Service Company of Indiana. It now serves 185 communities in central and western Indiana.

Electricity supplies the bulk of revenues of Central Indiana Power company. It is sold in 184 communities. Gas is sold in 8, water in 4, heat in 4, and ice in 3.

Gross revenue for the first nine months of 1933 totaled $2,846,000. Nominal profits were reported in the first and second quarters of 1933, but loss of $121,000 in the third quarter wiped out the first half's profit and resulted in loss of $47,000 for the first nine months. For the corresponding 1932 period gross was $3,180,000 and net income was $294,000, or $5.22 per preferred share.

	Gross rev.	Net inc.	Times chgs earned.
1932	$4,034,000	$ 403,000	1.62
1931	8,057,000	1,367,000	1.86
1930	9,477,000	967,000	1.41
1929	7,228,000	988,000	1.58

The above figures are subject to depreciation charges. The realignment of subsidiaries prevents a suitable comparison between 1932 results and those for previous years.

Current assets at the close of 1932 totaled $1,092,000 and current liabilities were $946,000. Funded debt, none of which matures prior to 1943, aggregates $9,749,000. There are outstanding 56,370 shares of $100 of 7 per cent cumulative preferred on which no dividends have been paid since Sept. 1, 1932.

Earnings have been adversely affected by general reduction in business activity and rate reductions.

Answer: The first 5s, due 1951, and the first and refunding 5s, due 1957, are sound.

A. H. Wiggin Resigns as Member of Board.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 14.—Albert H. Wiggin, Percy A. Rockefeller, and two other directors have resigned or signified their desire to retire from the board of the American International corporation, an investment trust, according to the annual report made public today. The other two are Beekman Winthrop of Robert Winthrop & Co. and Robert K. Cassatt of Cassatt & Co.

Mr. Winthrop has resigned, while the others have indicated their desire not to be reelected, and the board has decided not to fill the vacancies at the annual meeting, reducing the board to twelve. Mr. Rockefeller is a director of the National City bank, as is Mr. Winthrop. Mr. Cassatt is a director of banks in Philadelphia.

Assets Increase in Value.

The net value of assets of the corporation increased from $17,768,772 to $17,929,286 in the year. After deducting debentures, net assets applicable to common stock were $4.08 a share on Dec. 31, against $3.40 a year earlier. In the year, bonds having a face value of $361,050 were bought and retired by the treasury at an average cost of $68.73 per cent, reducing the outstanding issue to $13,821,000.

The treasury common stock was increased from 5,369 shares to 52,892 shares, partly through the return of 23,721 shares held under an employes' profit sharing plan which terminated on Dec. 31; and partly through the transfer to the corporation of 23,802 shares held for some years by the Allied Machinery corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary.

Cash Shows Decline.

Cash declined from $1,087,165 to $288,642; notes and bond investments were cut from $5,835,842, or 31.55 per cent of the total assets, to $2,603,995, or 13.97 per cent; preferred stocks dropped from $2,093,665 to $1,915,405; investments in common stocks jumped from $8,296,495, or 44.85 per cent of total assets, to $12,712,528, or 68.25 per cent.

The largest jump came in industrial common stocks, which were increased from $1,582,628, or 8.56 per cent of total assets, to $6,512,575, or 34.97 per cent. Investments in public utility issues declined from $2,044,549 to $1,-782,163, while bank stock investments dropped from $3,154,232 to $1,956,187.

FARM PRODUCTS RISE AS OTHERS HOLD UNCHANGED

The index of farm product prices, in percentage of the 1910-'14 average, was 68, an advance of two points over the previous week, while prices farmers paid for commodities were unchanged at 118 per cent of the pre-war average.

The rise in farm prices, which offset the loss of the previous week, was the result of an advance in prices of cotton, feed grain, hogs, calves, lambs, chickens, dairy products and potatoes. Wheat declined slightly and eggs continued their usual seasonal decline.

The farm products price index on Dec. 27 compared with 68 on Dec. 15 and 52 in December, 1932. The commodity price index compared with 117 in mid-November and 103 in December, 1932. The index of purchasing power of farm products was 58, eight points, or 16 per cent, higher than in December, 1932.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 14.—The copper industry is said to be more divided than ever on a code under the NRA. Heretofore, the big three, Anaconda, Phelps Dodge and Kennecott, have been more or less in accord on what should be contained in a code, but it is now understood that there has been a split. Kennecott and Phelps Dodge in conjunction with United Verde recently submitted a proposed code which provided that at least 75 per cent of the current requirement of fabricators should be from new production. Anaconda, it is said, is opposed to any code containing a clause prescribing how much copper the fabricators should take from stocks and how much from new production.

It is believed that Anaconda would not be averse to entering a "gentleman's agreement" along that line, but not to the extent that fabricators must take 75 per cent of their requirements from new production. This is the first important rift in the ranks of the big three since discussions on the code started last summer and the consensus is that it will further delay a code for the industry.

STOCKS OF CRUDE OIL SHOW GAIN; OUTPUT RECEDES

Washington, D. C., Jan. 14.—The interior department reported that stocks of domestic and foreign crude petroleum at the close of the week ended Jan. 6 totaled 343,284,000 barrels, an increase of 809,000 barrels over the preceding week.

The increase represented a daily average gain of 116,000 barrels, comprising an increase of 593,000 barrels in domestic crude stocks and 216,000 barrels in foreign crude stocks. The industry's current reports pointed to material declines in both crude production and crude runs to stills during the week. Imports of crude were further reduced and the meager information available on exports indicated a decline from the preceding week.

Because of the many revisions in current motor fuel stock data the report said, "it is virtually impossible to continue to estimate the trend of such stocks at this time."

LEGAL NOTICES.

TO ALL CREDITORS AND STOCKHOLDERS OF GENERAL THEATRES EQUIPMENT, INC.:

YOU ARE HEREBY NOTIFIED that the undersigned, Daniel O. Hastings, receiver of GENERAL THEATRES EQUIPMENT, INC., has filed in the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware, in and for New Castle County, at Wilmington, Delaware, his petition praying for authority to enter into a certain proposed agreement with The Chase National Bank of the City of New York, more fully hereinafter described and referred to, and for the approval of the said agreement by the Chancellor of the State of Delaware, and that said petition has been set down for a hearing in the Court Room of the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware, at Wilmington, Delaware, on Tuesday, the 13th day of February A. D. 1934, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon. The Order of the said Court setting the said petition down for such hearing provides that all persons interested and desiring to be heard relative to the prayers of the said petition shall then and there appear and be heard, and thereafter be barred from objecting to any Order which the said Court may make in the premises.

The said proposed agreement between the undersigned, as receiver of General Theatres Equipment, Inc., and The Chase National Bank of the City of New York is referred to and described in the aforesaid petition and exhibits attached thereto. The said petition is on file in the office of the Register of the Court of Chancery of the State of Delaware, in and for New Castle County, at the County Court House, Wilmington, Delaware, and is there open to inspection by all parties in interest. Copies of the said petition are also available for inspection by parties in interest at the offices of counsel for the receiver, Messrs. Hughes, Schurman & Dwight, 100 Broadway, New York, New York, and Messrs. Marvel, Morford, Ward & Logan, Delaware Trust Building, Wilmington, Delaware.

The Chase National Bank of the City of New York has filed claims in the receivership of General Theatres Equipment, Inc., in an amount in excess of $20,000,000.00. To secure such indebtedness there are pledged with the said The Chase National Bank various securities, including the preferred stock of Film Securities Corporation pledged in connection with a loan in the face amount of $9,700,000.00. Such preferred stock has been or is about to be rendered practically valueless by the sale at public auction of assets of said Film Securities Corporation consisting of 600,900 shares of the common stock of Loew's, Inc., pledged to secure notes of said Film Securities Corporation now in default. The Chase National Bank is to reduce its claim against General Theatres Equipment, Inc. by $5,000,000.00, and the receiver of General Theatres Equipment, Inc. is to cause the balance of the allowance of the said claim in the reduced amount, namely, $15,310,832.19, to confirm the pledge with the said Bank of the securities now held by it to secure the said indebtedness, to the release from all claims which General Theatres Equipment, Inc. or its receiver may have against them said Chase National Bank, The Chase Corporation, Chase Harris Forbes Corporation, the officers and directors of said corporation, and Halsey Stuart & Co. Inc., Pynchon & Co., West & Co. and W. S. Hammons Co., and to enable the said corporation in certain financing of General Theatres Equipment, Inc., and their officers, directors and partners.

In connection with such proposed agreement, said Chase National Bank has made an agreement with the Consolidated Protective Committee for Ten-Year 6% Convertible Gold Debentures, dated April 1, 1930 of General Theatres Equipment, Inc., the more important features of such proposed agreement being that the said Bank is to participate in a reorganization of General Theatres Equipment, Inc., provided the details of the plan of reorganization (including releases as aforesaid) are worked out in a manner satisfactory to the said Bank, and to turn over to the reorganized Company its secured claims, accompanied by the collateral securing them, in exchange for shares of common stock of such reorganized Company, to be issued on the same pro rata basis as to debenture holders and other unsecured creditors, and also to give to the reorganized Company an option to purchase at $15.00 a share approximately 323,000 shares of the Class A common stock of Fox Film Corporation, such option to be good for one year, and further to lend to such reorganized corporation reasonable amounts to cover the expenses of reorganization and working capital. Reference is hereby made to a copy of such agreement between the said Bank and the undersigned, submitted to the aforesaid petition of the Receiver of General Theatres Equipment, Inc. for a fuller statement of its terms.

The undersigned, as receiver of General Theatres Equipment, Inc., has recommended to the Chancellor of the State of Delaware that the aforesaid agreement between him and the said Bank be approved.
